Agriculture Still Fundless As Conferees Fail to Agree

Motion to Discharge Members Deadlocked On Farm Measure Under Consideration

Senate Confirms Meaney

Pay Day Nears

By Robert C. Albright

A motion to discharge deadlocked House conferees on the farm bill last night was reported under study, as the far-flung activities of the Agriculture Department faced a second moneyless day.

Managers of the 680-million-dollar bill, in unbroken disagreement since June 16, moved into the second day of the new fiscal year apparently without hope of a settlement, despite a virtual ultimatum from the leadership.

Unwilling to approve a temporary extension of funds that might lead to another impasse with the Senate, Speaker Rayburn told divided conferees to go back to work.

Motion in Order Monday

If no agreement has been reached by next Monday, 20 days after last appointment of the farm conferees, a motion to discharge the committee will be in order. If the conferees are discharged, or report another disagreement, the Speaker can appoint a new conference committee.

Budget officers of the department meanwhile said that Monday, July 6, is the absolute deadline they can operate without funds and still meet their July 8 payroll for 89,511 employes. Failing an appropriation by that time, departmental workers would be paid only for the last seven days of June, or "half pay."

Meat Inspection Endangered

One official said the department, without legal authority to make any payments or incur obligations, might "stagger along" for a few days but essential services would be impaired if the money continued tied up.

No Federal aid allotments to the States for operation of State extension work and experimental farms can be made in the meantime, it was pointed out, nor can travel vouchers be paid. Meat inspection, essential to clearance of vast stocks of meat needed in the war effort, was cited as one essential activity that will be hit by lack of funds.

In the Senate, Majority Leader Barkley expressed hope that a satisfactory farm bill solution could be reached this week, either through agreement of conferees or a temporary extension of funds.

For the other vital agency whose funds were both caught and cut in the midyear money jam—the Office of Price Administration—Barkley saw no chance of final Congressional

Sales Tax Bloc To Poll House On 5% Levy

A poll of the position of every member of the House on sales-tax proposals to meet nearly three billion dollars in tax-bill shortages will be made by advocates of a 5 per cent Federal retail levy.

This was learned last night as Democratic proponents of a sales tax prepared to make one final fight for Ways and Means Committee approval at a showdown late next week.

To ascertain in advance the sentiment of the House, letters are expected to be written to every member over this weekend and results of the poll laid before the committee.

Wholesale Republican desertions meanwhile were reported to have weakened the drive to bring the $5,924,000,000 up to the Treasury's $6,709,000,000 "par" by a retail tax on virtually every article in general use.

Key House Republicans, some of whom have formerly favored such a tax, were said to be unwilling to take responsibility for forcing the issue in the House, preferring that any fight made be first waged in the Senate.

Without general Republican support there would be little prospect of either committee or House approval, but Democratic advocates prepared to "go down the line."

Canned Fruits Up 15%

Crack in Price Ceiling Blamed on Congress

(See editorial "Fiscal Year" on Page 14.)

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Top Federal executives last night appealed to the country to get Congress back in line on President Roosevelt's program for keeping down living costs in a move dramatized by announcement from Price Administrator Leon Henderson that he had been compelled to authorize the first major break in the general retail price ceiling.

Henderson, in a "statement addressed to American housewives," declared that he was driven to take steps that will raise the price on the 1942 crop of canned and dried fruits by 15 per cent and maybe more by the time the "new pack" reaches grocers' shelves.

Other Phases Jeopardized

A short time later he issued another statement, this one aimed at the American public in general, in which he charged that "utter disorganization and anarchy" faces the Office of Price Administration's control over the distribution of scarce commodities as a result of House action in slashing 86 million dollars from OPA's budget estimates.

All other phases of OPA's program—including price control and rent regulation—have been "placed in jeopardy" by the House, said Henderson.

Henderson blamed Congress on two scores for the ceiling breakout of fruits preserved from the 1942 crop. Essentially, he said, the rise was necessary to rescue packers from being caught in the squeeze between rising prices to growers and the general price ceiling.

He took care to point out that the Price Control Act specifically forbids him to maintain maximum prices on agricultural commodities below certain standards. These standards, including 110 per cent of parity, were written into the law at the insistence of the Congressional farm bloc.

Could Have Been Saved

Despite restrictions of the price-control law, Henderson said, it still would have been possible to save the food packers if steps had been taken to permit the Government to absorb the difference between ceiling prices and what the price act requires fruit growers to be paid.

The price administrator obviously was referring to subsidies and the refusal of Congress thus far to grant them.

Henderson pointed out that the subsidy method has been used in Canada and Great Britain in similar instances.

Smith On Inflation

This time, the scrappy Henderson was not battling Congress alone on an issue that swiftly was assuming historic proportions and on which it was rumored (but denied at the White House) that President Roosevelt might soon have something to say to the country.

Coincidentally, a few hours after Henderson landed his one-two

Steel Officials Ask OPA Rule On Pay Raise

Consideration Sought For 'Inflationary' Aspect of Demands

By Ben Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Representatives of Inland Steel Co. at a stormy War Labor Board hearing yesterday asked WLB to let Leon Henderson's Office of Price Administration determine the inflationary effects of a wage increase of $1 a day for the Nation's steel workers, after C. I. O. President Philip Murray denounced attempts to hold steel wages at existing levels and bitterly attacked Henderson's wage, price control, and rationing policies.

The WLB hearing was held on the request of the United Steel Workers of America, C. I. O., for the wage increase, union shop, and checkoff of union dues from the four "Little Steel" companies. In addition to Inland, "Little Steel" includes Bethlehem Steel Corporation, Republic Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co.

Representatives of Inland and Bethlehem voiced vigorous objections to a WLB order of a union shop, check-off or other form of union security, including the compromise maintenance of membership frequently ordered by the board. Both companies stated that they believed such orders illegal, and that the board did not have the power to issue them. Inland indicated that it was considering appealing any such decision from the board to the courts.

The hearing followed the release of a fact-finding report of a special

N. Y. Area Scene Of Roundup; Military To Try 8 Saboteurs

By International News Service

New York, July 1.—Seizure of 24 suspected Axis agents and three powerful short wave transmitters capable of contacting enemy U-boats at sea was announced by FBI agents late today after a series of swift raids in the New York area.

The raids, a direct result of the capture of eight Nazi saboteurs landed from Axis submarines along the Atlantic seaboard recently, were concentrated on the Brooklyn Navy Yard district, the Yorkville section of Manhattan, densely populated with Germans, and key industrial areas of New Jersey.

[At the same time it was reported from Altoona, Pa., by the United Press, that FBI agents had begun a roundup of 250 enemy aliens in that area, which includes the Pennsylvania Railroad's horseshoe curve which the eight Nazi saboteurs reportedly had marked for destruc-

Custodial Workers Voted Pay Raise

Pay raises for an estimated 190,000 Federal custodial workers, of whom about 25,000 are in the District, were voted yesterday by the House. However, the House, on motion of Representative Rees (Republican) of Kansas limited the increases to employes in the first eight grades of the custodial services and grades 1 and 2 in the subprofessional service.

Six Nurses Are Decorated For Heroic Service in Bataan

Six United States Army nurses, still recovering from three months' service in Bataan and Corregidor under "the most critical circumstances in history," yesterday were awarded royal blue citation ribbons by Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy in a ceremony at Red Cross National Headquarters.

In awarding the ribbons, McCloy said: "I issue these citations in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of the deserved honor and distinction earned by these officers of the United States Army."

The First Lady arrived by plane from New York especially to bring personal greetings from the President, whose tribute was:

"To those who are here today, God bless you for service well done. To those left behind, have faith for the day of liberation will come."

The nurses are the first American women to be decorated for service during World War II and will wear the same ribbons as will all the defenders of Bataan.

Still shaky from the hardships of war in the Pacific, the nurses represented the 72 other women who performed similar duties from the outbreak of war to the fall of Corregidor.

Surg. Gen. James C. Magee pinned the ribbons to the lapel of each nurse's dark blue uniform as Miss Mary Beard, director of the Red Cross nursing service, called their names.

They are Dorothea Daley of Hamilton, Mo.; Florence MacDonald of Brockton, Mass.; Juanita Redmond of Swansea, S. C.; Harriet G. Lee of Great Barrington, Mass.; Mary Lohr of Greensburg, Pa., and Eunice C. Hatchitt of Lockhart, Tex.

All except Miss MacDonald saw action at Bataan until they were evacuated to Corregidor early in April. Miss MacDonald, a first lieutenant, went directly from Fort

21 Soldiers Die in W. Va. Plane Crash

Transport Plunges Into Victory Garden After Losing Wing; 13 Bodies Identified

By the Associated Press

Welch, W. Va., July 1.—Twenty-one soldiers, southbound through the mountains in a converted airliner, were killed today when their ship lost a wing at 500 feet and crashed in flames into a miners' "victory" garden.

State troopers indicated the death list might increase as they went through the ruins of the 24-place transport and sent posses through the woods near the mining village of Premier to see if any men had jumped before the crash.

While the former American Airlines flagship was still burning, rescuers brought out ten mangled bodies. The crash occurred shortly after noon.

In midafternoon an eleventh body was found, and late in day after the aluminum hull had cooled ten others were removed.

13 Identified by Tags

All the bodies were brought to Welch, 3 miles from Premier, to await the arrival of Army officers.

Troopers said 13 bodies could be identified by tags, one other by clothing and the fifteenth possibly by a ring. The others, they said, carried no identification after being through charring heat for two or more hours.

The community of Premier is in the southern West Virginia mountains near the Virginia line and in the heart of a rich coal field. The garden in which the ship crashed was in the upper end of the village.

Eight State troopers were placed on guard around the plane.

Wreckage Buried 200 Yards

Lieut. F. B. Crawford of the Beckley State Police was in charge of the contingent, and said his men would remain on guard until soldiers arrived here from an Army post in Ohio.

Along with duffel bags, canteens and other equipment, searchers recovered a partly burned postcard which read:

"All that a birthday can hold of joy—that's what I am wishing for my dear boy."

It was signed "Pop."

On personal effects strewn on the ground, the investigators found these

Russians Admit Foe Is Advancing But Fight Goes On Hand-to-Hand

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Thursday), July 2. The Russians officially acknowledged today that Axis troops had succeeded in advancing in fierce, hand-to-hand fighting for Sevastopol, but German claims that the Crimean port had fallen were not confirmed here.

The defenders of the huge fortress-port met as many as 20 German assaults on a single position in their last-ditch fight and the bodies of hundreds of enemy men were left on the field, the Soviets declared.

The Nazis "at the cost of enormous losses succeeded in advancing a little," the Soviets announced in their midnight communique.

27th Day of Siege

The titanic struggle for the Crimean seaport - fortress city (which the Germans announced they had captured at noon Wednesday) flamed through the twenty-seventh day of heavy siege yesterday while far to the north the Red army was reported beating off constant waves of German tank-supported infantrymen in the Kursk area 300 miles south of Moscow.

A supplement to the regular communique said of the grim Sevastopol struggle:

"Regardless of enormous losses, the enemy continues his fierce storming of Sevastopol. The gallant defenders of the city are fighting with self-sacrifice against superior forces of Hitlerites."

Claim Garrison Trapped

Sevastopol is a key to naval control of the Black Sea lanes leading to the oil of the Caucasian mainland to the east, and is the only part of the Crimean Peninsula not yet fully conquered by the Nazis.

The battered Red Army and Navy garrison there has beaten off relentless Nazi attacks, but Soviet newspapers have acknowledged their outnumbered troops were in an increasingly grave position. The defenders have been handicapped by lack of aircraft because of the narrow corner they held on the peninsula.

(The Germans in announcing the capture of Sevastopol, said that remnants of the Red army garrison had been trapped in the Khersones Peninsula just outside the city. The Khersones Peninsula is a spit of land just outside Sevastopol and is the southwestern extremity of the Crimean Peninsula.)

Of the fighting in the Kursk area the regular communique said "our

Chungking, July 1.—The Japanese have all but closed their giant pincers on the Chekiang-Kiangsi Railday, the Chinese high command indicated tonight, but an army spokesman denied a Tokyo announcement that the entire strategic 450-mile line was in Japanese hands.

From Kweiki, the eastbound Japanese column plunged 18 miles to seize Iyang while the westbound force fought its way across the Sin River southwest of Shangjao. That was the situation of Monday and Tuesday, according to the communique, with the enemy's pincers points less than 25 miles apart and pressing hard on the bitterly resisting Chinese.

Libyan Defeat Is Blamed On Blunders

Churchill Statement On Strength of British In Desert Called False

By John E. Lee
International News Service Staff Writer

London, July 1.—After Winston Churchill refused to silence critics until the African crisis passes, Britain was told today that her crushing defeats there mushroomed from "tactical mistakes."

In a Commons debate on the first "no confidence" motion directed at the Churchill government, a debate in which Prime Minister Churchill's direction of the defense ministry was harshly criticized, Capt. Oliver Lyttleton, Minister of Production, admitted the superior armor, weight and range of German tanks fighting in the Libyan and Egyptian deserts.

But, said Lyttelton, American-made tanks are arriving daily to aid Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck's Eighth Army. Dive bombers already have reached one theater of war and more are en route.

Lyttelton, the first government speaker, acknowledged that the Libyan defeat and subsequent reverses in Egypt sprang from tactical mistakes, the "unsuitability" of the British "Crusader" tanks to desert conditions, plus suepriority of the German tanks.

The no-confidence motion, which attacks Churchill's handling of the defense ministry but not his administration as Prime Minister, was introduced on Churchill's own decision.

British Hurling Reserve Troops Into Onslaughts At El Alamein

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, July 1.—The main British armored forces, bolstered by reserves, finally locked arms today with the onrushing Axis columns in Egypt in a last-ditch effort to pinch off the hostile advance in the desert bottleneck west of El Alamein, 70 miles from the Nile Delta.

The immediate stake was the great British naval base of Alexandria, and for the British all their holdings in the Middle East were imperiled.

Just before midnight scanty dispatches indicated the battle area still remained just west of El Alamein and extended 30 or 40 miles inland from the coast.

Fighting Is Most Severe

There was no positive news of the course of the churning desert fight because the commanders were as yet too busy to report detailed actions. It is known that the fighting has been very hard, with armored and mechanized infantry forces lashing at each other with all their power.

The forces of Marshal Erwin Rommel, driving with amazing speed across the torrid sands toward the delta and the key waterway of Suez, were engaged this morning in a conflict that had developed by tonight to great proportions just inside the mouth of the bottleneck.

First reports to reach Cairo told of heavy fighting all the way down the escarpment.

Several Lines of Defense

It was the nearest thing to a last-ditch stand for the British who have been engaged only on a hit-and-run basis since the fall of Tobruk.

However, between the Axis forces and the lush valley of the Nile stand several lines of defense comprising thousands of soldiers and hundreds of cannon; and teamed with these are other Allied units harassing the enemy flanks while Allied planes strike from overhead.

As the crisis approached, Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck, newly in active command of the British Eighth Army, issued a confident order of the day declaring:

"Officers and men of the Eighth Army!

"You have fought hard and continuously for over a month. No troops could have fought better. You have had heavy losses and despite your efforts you ex-

U. S. Ship Sunk In Caribbean; Toll Is Now 329

By the Associated Press

The toll of ship losses in the Battle of the Atlantic climbed to 329 last night in the unofficial Associated Press tabulation with word of the torpedoing of a medium-sized United States merchantman June 15 in the Caribbean.

Four members of the crew of 38 were lost, but the only two passengers were saved after the vessel was sunk by two torpedoes which struck almost simultaneously about 8:30 p. m., survivors said.

The survivors succeeded in launching the one undamaged lifeboat before the vessel sank. They were picked up by a naval vessel late the next afternoon and taken to a West Indian island.

A survivor, Robert F. Trost of Ozone Park, Long Island, N. Y., reported that the same ship had been bombed while in the Middle East but escaped without serious damage.

The Navy also announced earlier yesterday the sinking of a medium-sized Panamanian cargo ship in the Caribbean with the loss of only one man in the crew of 32.

Preferred Occupational

Fourteen classifications of passenger car uses which would permit motorists to apply for the maximum allowable gasoline ration under the permanent rationing plan starting July 22 were made public yesterday by the Office of Price Administration.

The classifications were described as "preferred" occupational uses on the basis of which applicants for extra gasoline rations may seek the "C" coupon book, provided they can show a need for more than 470 miles of driving a month.

The list of uses is:

1. Official Government business.
2. Transportation of United States mail.
3. Public School officials traveling from school to school.
4. Wholesale newspaper or magazine delivery.
5. Carrying news camera or photographic equipment for dissemination of public information. The applicant must show that his equipment is of the nonportable type.
6. Physicians, surgeons, nurses, veterinarians.
7. Ministers, priests or rabbis.
8. Transportation of farm products and supplies.
9. Transportation of farm, marine and transportation workers, or commercial fishermen to or between jobs; recruiting or training of such workers.
10. Transportation of members of the armed forces to or between posts of duty.
11. Transportation of essential war workers to or between jobs.
12. Construction, repair, or maintenance services; transportation of equipment or materials; specialized services to agricultural, extractive, or industrial establishments.
13. Salesmen of farm or industrial machinery. Medical supplies and foods esential to the war effort.
14. Motorcycles used for delivery or messenger service.

Every passenger car driver, it was explained, will be issued an "A" book, good for 240 miles a month at the rate of 15 miles to the gallon, when he registers for the permanent plan at schools in the District and 17 Eastern States, July 9, 10 and 11.

To obtain a ration book entitling him to as many as 470 miles of occupational driving a month, the motorist will have to show that he belongs to a "car-sharing club," or

Drottningholm's Last Voyage

Nazis Cancel 'Safe Conduct,' Violating Pact on Exchanges

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., July 1.—Termination by Germany of an agreement permitting safe conduct voyage by the liner Drottningholm was announced today while a rigorous search of the vessel continued here and more than 800 passengers were held aboard the ship.

Berlin's refusal to continue the exchange of American and German nationals through the liner chartered to the Swiss government was disclosed by the State Department in Washington.

Whether there was any connection betwen the German action and the fact that the present passengers were held incommunicado for the second day was not immediately known. The Nazi government declared it could not guarantee the safety of the ship's future voyages.

The diplomatic exchange liner had already made two trips between Lisbon and New York, and the German-American agreement provided for continuous voyages until completion of the repatriation of Americans in Europe and Germans here.

A State Department representative said in New York yesterday that Lisbon was "about cleared" of Americans, but the number of Nazi nationals remaining in this country was not announced.

Trouble developed on the Drottningholm's arrival at Lisbon on its second trip. The Germans began to hedge at that time, and agreed only after much hesitation to give the ship safe conduct for the run to New York. It was explained unofficially that the Germans hesitated to guarantee its safety through the American coastal zone, sown with floating mines from submarines.

The liner docked yesterday, and military and civil authorities immediately began ransacking the ship from stem to stern. They examined more than 3000 pieces of luggage, censored all mail and other docu-

War Sidelights

U. S. Fliers Forced Down, Capture Jap

Somewhere in Australia, July 1 (AP).—The crew of an American bomber forced down in the Coral Sea by lack of fuel, has reached an allied base with a captive Japanese pilot and a wounded American they picked up en route.

Corp. Donald Welch of Berlin, N. H., said the bomber sank at night within 4 minutes. "I smashed a window to get out," he said. "One member of the crew had a dislocated back so we put him on the collapsible raft and the rest of us clung to the sides and paddled 3 miles to an island.

Nearby they found a downed Japanese flier, and took him prisoner.

"The next morning we started walking along the beach when three native canoes happened along.

"They (the natives) took us to the mainland, where we found some natives tending another wounded American pilot at a village. We stayed at the village for a while and then carried the wounded through the jungle to a deserted mission station where we got transportation back"

Chinese Fliers Graduate

Tallahassee, Fla., July 1 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Carlisle H. Wash, handing graduation certificates to 39 Chinese aviation cadets at Dale Mabry Field here today, promised them that American fliers in "ever increasing numbers" will join them in their homeland for action against the Japanese.

"We are glad to have had the opportunity to associate with you and to know you," General Wash told the young fighters, "and when, in ever increasing numbers, we go to your country, as we shall, we hope to find you there to welcome us."

More Czechs to Die

London, July 1 (AP).—Courts-martial in Prague and Bruenn sentenced 115 persons to death yesterday, the Vichy radio, quoting reports from Budapest, said today.

The sentences were given on charges of having been in contact with enemy agents, for approving the attack on the late Gestapo leader, Reinhard Heydrich, for failing to report to the police or for illegal possession of arms, the French radio said.

Cubans Register Aug. 1-15

Havana, July 1 (AP).—The Ministry of Defense announced today that the first of more than one million Cubans would register for military service August 1-15.

Of the first group to register—those between 18 and 25 years of age—10,000 will be chosen by lot for immediate active military service.

The second group, between 25 and 35 years of age, will register in November and the third group, 35 to 50, will register next February.

troops repelled attacks of the German Fascist troops."

"On some sectors large tank operations took place. The enemy suffered heavy losses in men and equipment."

A supplementary bulletin also said that the Germans were bringing in fresh reserves, but "our artillery, airmen, tankmen and infantrymen are successfully smashing the enemy's tank and infantry units."

Press dispatches had reported earlier a resumption of fighting 100 miles west of Moscow, but the communique said there were no significant changes on that front or elsewhere.

The German onslaught near Gzhatsh, west of Moscow, an area comparatively quiet for several months, began with a heavy 40-minute bombardment by at least 120 cannon, said Red Star, army newspaper.

Six Regiments Repulsed

Then six regiments of Nazi infantry sought to pierce the Russian lines by a sharp thrust but strong Soviet artillery and machine-gun fire repulsed them, said Red Star.

The entire German Seventh Division then was thrown in and made a breach 2 miles deep and one mile wide, but was hurled back, leaving 2500 dead, said Red Star.

The concerted blasting of Russian aerial bombs and artillery shells killed many more in the rear.

As the a result the Nazis broke off the attack as quickly as they had begun it, with the Russians standing on their original positions, Red Star reported.

On the Kursk front, the Germans were said earlier to have advanced slightly at one point, but Red Star said it cost them 150 tanks and the Russians strengthened a new line which blocked any further advance.

Nazis' Flanks Imperiled

In the fourth day of the great German offensive, Kursk dispatches said the Nazis now were trying to cover the flanks of their salient with fresh reserves, but that German losses in men and machines were terrific.

German tank losses alone were put at more than 350, and Nazi soldiery was declared slaughtered by companies and battalions.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, said Russian resistance was growing stronger by the hour, and "in a number of places our units are making successful counterattacks.

"One of our units defending an important height withstood five stubborn enemy attacks. Next day the Germans resumed their onslaught and the unit beat back two more attacks.

"Sustaining heavy losses, the enemy fell back to his initial positions and was obliged to pass to the defensive."

In one day's fighting in one small sector 2000 Germans were killed, the Russian accounts stated.

Hungarians in Battle

(The German High Command mentioned for the first time operations of "considerable extent" by German and other Axis troops, said to be Hungarians, in the central sector).

At Sevastopol, Red Star acknowledged the garrison was suffering losses. With more than 225,000 Axis troops in the attack, several divisions are being concentrated on narrow fronts, attacking in close formation behind tanks, said Red Star. A single Red army battalion has been thus attacked after a barrage of 3000 artillery shells and 2000 big bombs, the paper reported.

Today's Russian dispatches used for the first time the term "Volkhov Front," referring to the region south of Leningrad. The Russians were declared to have improved their lines by taking the initiative there, clearing away mine fields, capturing four pillboxes and destroying seven others.

(The Germans almost daily have reported action on the Volkhov Front, claiming encirclement and decimation of Russian forces there.)

Nazis Claim Sevastopol

(The capture of Sevastopol, great Soviet stronghold hailed by the German besiegers as "the most powerful land and sea fortress in the world," was announced by the German high command after a siege of nearly a month.

(Adolf Hitler immediately raised Col. Gen. Fritz von Mannstein to the rank of field marshal general, a subsequent announcement said.)

Standard of Jersey Will Recover 2 Large Properties

By the United Press

Mexico City, July 1.—In a surprising decision that may reopen the whole petroleum question, the second section of the supreme court today ordered returned to the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey two large properties expropriated by the Mexican government in 1938.

Acting unanimously, the five justices reversed a decision of the lower courts and ruled that two subsidiary companies—the Compania Petrolera Titania and Compania Petrolera Mercedes—be given back, with everything that belonged to them. The decision is final and beyond repeal.

The Titania and Mercedes companies, covering approximately 1,500,000 acres of exploratory land in the northern part of the State of Tamaulipas, were only two out of a total of 13 Mexican holdings of Standard of Jersey, but oil circles considered that the precedent of the decision might similarly affect at least 10 other holdings.

The decision was based on a technicality, namely that the Titania and Mercedes companies were not named in the government's original expropriatory decree of March 18, 1938. Therefore, the court ruled, they were never legally expropriated although the government took full possession of them.

The government, through the Ministry of National Economy, had argued that failure to name the companies in the original decree did not matter since one Jersey subsidiary—the Huasteca Petroleum Co.—was named and that the 12 others, including the Titania and Mercedes, were merely branches of the Huasteca.

The court rejected this argument and said there was nothing produced to support this claim.

The supreme court decision, following four years of litigation, plainly astounded Mexican oil men, who admitted the ramifications were almost boundless.

Similar litigation involving ten other Standard Oil of New Jersey holdings is proceeding.

ments, and up to early evening apparently had not disembarked a single one of the passengers kept aboard ship over night.

The Drottninghalm has brought home on return voyages an aggregate of 1443 American nationals and their families, along with 390 nationals of other American republics and their families, in addition to a group of Canadians.

Strange Scrutiny Unexplained

That the procedure on its arrival this time was prompted by some unusual development appeared certain, since the Portuguese liner Guine, which arrived in New York yesterday with some 500 European refugees, disembarked all its passengers within a few hours.

The Drottninghalm's passenger list on this voyage included more than 500 Americans, and strangely enough these seemed to be undergoing the closest scrutiny. All their baggage was placed on the pier during the day and Americans were taken singly and in pairs by officials to inspect it—then returned to the ship.

All the passengers, with the exception of about 100 who were permitted to leave yesterday, spent a thoroughly annoying two days. Last night the weather was hot, the bar was closed and food stocks reportedly were running low.

About 500 friends of persons aboard swarmed over the pier this morning only to be met with a sudden announcement clearing all persons, including newspapermen and photographers, from the pier. Only officials and Red Cross workers were permitted near the ship.

Woman Tells How Nazi Flier Met Helper

By Paul M. Chandler
Associated Press Staff Writer

Detroit, July 1. — Oberleutnant Hans Peter Krug, the German Luftwaffe officer who escaped from a Canadian prison camp, came to Detroit dirty, ragged, "like a hunted animal," and met Max Stephan, the German-born restaurant owner charged with treason for aiding Krug in his flight.

Such was the description given in Federal Court today by Mrs. Margaretta Johanna Bertelmann, a German alien to whose apartment the Nazi fugitive first went for help after crossing the Detroit River in a rowboat April 18. No charges have been placed against her.

Nervous and testifying in a high voice, Mrs. Bertelmann broke into sobs when she admitted that she was not a citizen of the United States and once had been called before the United States Enemy Alien Hearing Board.

"The doorbell rang that morning and when I answered here was a ragged stranger asking if I had any carpenter work he could do," Mrs. Bertelmann testified.

Asked for Drink

"He asked if he could have a drink. He said he was terribly thirsty. I invited him in and he talked in German and told me he hade come from the Bowmanville (Ontario) camp.

"'You mean you are a German prisoner?' I asked.

"He said 'Yes.' I felt faint. 'You shouldn't have come,' I said. 'You can't stay here.'

"And he just stood there looking at me. Dirty, scared and like a frightened animal."

Mrs. Bertelmann said she then telephoned Stephan, who arrived at her house a few minutes later.

"'Go out into the kitchen,' I told Max," she continued. 'Why, you are shaking,' he said. 'What's wrong?' 'There's a prisoner of war out there,' I told him.

"When Stephan saw him he said, 'Why don't you give up? You haven't got a chance.'"

Sent Gifts to Nazis

Upon questioning by Judge Arthur Tuttle, Mrs. Bertelmann revealed that she had bought tobacco and knitted sweaters, scarfs and sox and had been sending them to Ontario prison camps for many months. She said Krug had seen her name on these packages.

Krug himself returned to court today so that witnesses could identify him.

failed in his plea for a directed verdict of innocent. He said he would present no witnesses.

Last Ditch Battle Raging in Egypt

perienced the disappointment of giving ground before an enemy who had superiority in armored troops. It must not be forgotten that he too has had serious losses, his units have been reduced in strength, he is a long way from his bases of supply.

Calls for Supreme Effort

"The situation now calls for the supreme effort on the part of all. We are fighting the battle of Egypt, a battle in which the enemy must be destroyed. You have shown you can stick it and I know you will stick it right out until he can stand it no longer. Until he cracks, the enemy must be given no rest, he must be attacked and harried wherever you find him.

"The battle is not over yet and will not be over until we have defeated the enemy, and defeat him we will."

[The Axis was reported to have concentrated three depleted armored divisions, a light tank division and four infantry divisions west of El Alamein. It is understood that against these forces, the British threw in two much-reduced tank divisions along with an unspecified number of separate tank groups and a greater number of infantry than the enemy.

[The Allied air forces now are said to be numerically superior to those of Rommel, but their bases are much farther back.

[Ironically enough, American-made tanks were reported in the conflict under both British and Axis banners. As the British threw brand-new American-built General Grant tanks into the fighting, other General Grants, captured, hastily repaired and smeared with the Nazi Swastika, were said to be in action with the Nazis.]

The main enemy force was hammering its way ahead in one big column, with smaller groups taking off on side expeditions in the battle aimed at extermination as well as prime imperial objectives.

Allied fighter planes still had control of the skies and were reported inflicting a heavy toll on enemy supply and transport planes, which were under fighter protection.

The British acknowledged enemy occupation of El Daba, formerly a main supply point for the British desert forces, and only 100 miles from Alexandria.

El Daba's strategical importance mainly lay in the fact that it was the strong point in the bottleneck bounded by the supposedly impassable depression and the Mediterranean coast.

Axis advance elements reached the vicinity of El Alamein yesterday, penetrating an area some 35 miles east of El Daba and about 65 miles from Alexandria.

This new contact with the British defenders occurred at the mouth of the bottleneck, the last confined area between natural flank barriers where it might be possible to stop the Axis forces before they could fan out over more likely terrain to strike at the Nile on several thrusts.

It was not known, however, that El Alamein was the area chosen by the British for the last-ditch fight to save Alexandria.

Before yielding El Daba, the imperials removed or destroyed virtually all supplies.

Threat To Alexandria Great

(El Alamein, which is about midway between Egypt's western frontier and Suez, was described by the Germans as the "last fortified position before Alexandria," but London military observers said it was of no greater importance "than any number of points" on the way to Alexandria.

(It was acknowledged in London circles, however, that the Allies could hardly yield further ground without sacrificing Alexandria and allowing Rommel to overrun the Nile Valley and the Suez.

"With the threat to Alexandria daily becoming larger, the British gave urgent study to the question of alternate bases for their warships in the Middle East. It was contended that if the vital base did fall, the Mediterranean fleet still could operate from Port Said, Egypt, at the northern end of the Suez Canal; Haifa, Palestine, which is the terminus for an oil pipe line from British-dominated Iraq, and possibly Beirut, Lebanon, which so far has been used only by small warships.

(There were hints in British circles that the Suez Canal would not be left in workable condition if it became apparent that it must fall into the enemys hands.)

Nine French Warships At Alexandria Base

By the Associated Press

London, July 1.—The German threat to Alexandria roused speculation today as to the future of nine French warships demilitarized in the British Mediterranean naval base in the event that it must be abandoned.

Although the breech-blocks and firing mechanisms have been removed from their guns the ships are seaworthy, manned by skeleton maintenance crews and could be refitted for battle.

The immobilized war vessels, there since the fall of France, are the 22,189-ton battleship Lorraine; the cruisers Duquesne, Tourville, Suffren and Dougay-Trouin; the destroyers Le Fortune, Basque and Forbin; and the submarine Protee.

it he would defer his motion until the battle of Egypt reached a definite conclusion, Churchill declared he felt the debate should be held now.

As cheers resounded, the Prime Minister, whose critics concede he will win out in this test, said bluntly:

"It would be even more injurious to delay the decision than to go forward with it. It has been flashed all over the world and when I was in the United States. I can testify that lively excitement was created there."

The motion's author, who has picked up about 20 votes in support of his move, characterized as "untrue and inaccurate" a statement made by Churchill before his recent American journey that the British in Libya were on equal terms with the Axis.

Wardlaw-Milne condemned Churchill for holding the defense ministry and demanded immediate action in "this very dangerous position." A wave of laughter greeted the Conservative M. P. when he suggested that King George's soldier brother, the Duke of Gloucester, be appointed commander in chief of the British Army.

"Gloucester," Wardlaw-Milne declared, "would greatly please the ranks and give the army somebody entirely independent."

He assailed the government for Malaya, for Singapore, for Tobruk, and criticized war production, as his attack traced the anticipated pattern.

Keyes Seconds Motion

Wardlaw-Milne's motion was seconded by Admiral Sir Roger Keyes, founder of the commandos, who disclosed that in the winter of 1940, he offered to go to the Mediterranean to organize commando raids on Italian bases.

They would have "knocked out Italy from North Africa before Germany could go to her rescue," Keyes said, but Churchill's naval adviser turned thumbs down on the plan.

Lyttelton, a recent visitor to the United States, declared that Britain and the United Sates are developing powerful tank and antitank weapons.

He heaped praise on the American-made General Grant tanks, which have been a part of Auchinleck's forces.

"He (Auchinleck) still has a substantial number," Lyttelton asserted, "and more are arriving on the battlefield daily."

In making the announcement that dive-bombers have reached one war theater and more are en route, Lyttelton added:

"And still more will be delivered from United States factories in the next few weeks, and will be handed over to the R. A. F. for support of the Army and Navy."

(Lack of dive bombers recently has become a sharply-debated issue in Britain, with leaders accused of lack of interest in obtaining this type of aircraft.)

Tactical Mistakes Listed

The minister of production explained that "our prime strategical object must be to defend British citizens in Malta and Palestine and friendly or allied people in other countries comprising the Middle East; to defend the Suez Canal and the oil fields of Iraq and Iran."

Lyttelton then enumerated the tactical mistakes which he said occurred in Libya:

1. British forces which pursued the Germans last winter south of Bengasi were too light for attack.

2. They were too extended for defense.

3. They were not strong enough for reconnaissance.

At the time of the evacuation of Dunkerque, Lyttelton revealed, Britain had only 200 light tanks armed with machine guns, and 50 infantry tanks.

Though production was increasing, he said, the British had only a small proportion of tanks on hand when the Libyan campaign opened.

Earl Winterton, Conservative, suggested that if Suez should fall, Churchill resign and become a member of a cabinet to be formed by one of his colleagues.

Churchill himself is expected to speak for an hour and a half—probably Thursday—before the Wardlaw-Milne motion is put to a vote.

termini of the railway, Hangchow and Nanchang.

Observers here, noting the communique's admission that the enemy's possession of the railway was virtually complete, expressed belief that this marked a stage in an ambitious Japanese plan to open an overland rail system linking her conquests from Malaya to Manchukuo.

The observers, however, commented that the Japanese still have far to go before this is achieved. Nearly 500 miles of the Hankow-Canton system remains in Chinese hands, both north and south of the Chuchow-Hengyang section, which extends west and south from Nanchang.

The Chinese reported continued Japanese advances in southeastern Kiangsi toward the Fukien border and admitted a setback in the Honan-Shansi border region, where Lingchwan, in southeastern Shansi, was abandoned to superior enemy forces.

Along the Honan-Anhwei border there was renewed fighting with honors about even.

Soldiers' Mid-Air Acrobatics Fail to Keep Plane Flying

By the Associated Press

Somewhere in Australia, July 1.—The story of the brave but fruitless attempt by two United States Army sergeants to keep a B-25 bomber in the air by leaning through a hole chopped in the plane's fuselage and trying to dislodge a life raft which had jammed the elevator controls was told here today on the crew's return from a Coral Sea reef.

Lieut. Leonard A. Hymes, bomber squadron medical officer, said that while three bombers attacked a Japanese base at Deboyne Island, off Puapua, New Guinea, a fourth bomber piloted by Lieut. H. V. Maull concentrated on seaplanes about to take off.

Maull was strafing the seaplanes at a low level when a Japanese bullet hit the bomber's life raft release. The raft fell out and became entangled in the elevators.

Hymes said the elevator controls jammed and Maull could not gain altitude.

The Japanese Zero fighters, noting his plight, closed in.

"While the rest of the crew concentrated on the guns and keeping the Zeros at a safe distance," Hymes related, "two sergeants, Prior and Fowler hacked a hole through the fuselage with jungle knives. Every now and then the crew had to leave the guns to crawl toward the tail so Maull could bring the bomber nose up and gain a little altitude.

"Fowler and Prior took turns holding each other's legs and leaning out, trying to reach the life raft with an iron rod and dislodge it.

"Their efforts were useless. The plane finally landed on a coral reef an hour later."

U. S. Carrier Arrived at Malta in Nick of Time

Wasp's Planes Helped Repel Heavy Attack

By John R. Henry
International News Service Staff Writer

With the Atlantic Fleet, (Delayed) The story can now be told of how the American aircraft carrier Wasp dared Axis guns in the Mediterranean and brought relief to the British fortress of Malta, and performed that mission without a mishap.

It was unscathed.

Equipment was intact.

The carrier invaded the embattled Mediterranean more than once and took nearly 100 fighter planes to the vital Allied stronghold that juts out of the sea between Sicily and Libya.

In Washington the Navy Department announced the exploit in a communique saying:

"1. Reinforcements in the form of airplanes were recently carried through the Mediterranean to Malta to aid the British in their defense of the embattled island.

"2. These trips were accomplished by the U. S. aircraft carrier Wasp and were completed without damage either to the escort or the Wasp.

"3. During one of these ferry trips after British aircraft, manned by R. A. F. pilots, had been launched from the Wasp and were in flight over the Island of Malta the enemy attacked the island. Completely surprised by the increased number of defending fighters the enemy suffered considerable losses.

"4. The planes which took off from the Wasp engaged the enemy over Malta before landing on the island. After landing and hasty refueling at the airdrome they were again in the air continuing to repel the enemy attack within 30 minutes after arrival.

"5. The expertly timed arrival of reinforcement planes on the Wasp was most fortunate for the heroic defenders of the British stronghold and the cause of the United Nations."]

Foe Fails in Efforts

The enemy failed miserably in efforts to thwart the operation, apparently because the maneuvers were so skillfully conceived and effectively executed.

Taking off from the mighty carrier and flying away into the sun, the British fighters reached Malta almost at a zero hour. Subsequent reports related that the rocket-like Spitfires barely had arrived before they were roaring aloft again to repulse a mass attack by enemy bombers.

This correspondent was the first newspaperman to visit the carrier. Immediately after its epochal accomplishment. I visited the ship in foreign waters. From those who executed the mission, I got the story.

Officers and crew spoke sparingly of their adventure. They had been forwarned of the secrecy that surrounded the trip.

Saga of the Sea

Bit by bit the story unraveled itself though, as one of the most dramatic sagas of the sea yet recorded in this era of blood and thunder.

Dangers of the journey through the narrow Straits of Gibraltar and into the sparkling, sky-blue basin were not discounted. The carrier was ready for a fight.

The British Spitfires were loaded aboard at a port in the United Kingdom and the mission was underway.

American fighters swarmed above the carrier and its escorting force, and they kept constant guard against enemy aerial thrusts.

The Navy fighters encountered only one of their foes.

A German Junkers plane was sighted after the ships had passed Gibraltar, but it dashed for its base when the American fighters roared toward it.

Enemy submarines, however, plagued the path of the carrier, but these, too, were driven to cover by depth barrages from United Nations destroyers.

When the Spitfires were loosed, the Naval units wheeled about and sped safely back toward the British Isles. All but two of the Spitfires reported safely to Malta.

They got there just in the nick of time. The fortress later reported that soon after the planes had arrived, a German bombing attack began ferociously, but, finding a bolstered defensive force returned across the sea minus nearly half of their number.

It was presumed that this fact prompted German press dispatches to claim that the defenses of Malta "have stiffened since the arrival of American members of the R. A. F. and American-made planes."

The role played by the United States carrier and its own fighter squadron received especial applause from high government and naval officials both in Great Britain and America.

Prime Minister Churchill, in behalf of the United Kingdom, dispatched personal congratulations.

He stated, "My congratulations to officers and men of your ship," then posed a witticism that probably will become a classic in American naval history.

"Who said the Wasp can sting only once?"

She Carried Planes to Reinforce Malta

THE WASP—The Navy yesterday revealed that the United States aircraft carrier Wasp had successfully carried planes through the Mediterranean to Malta to aid the British in their defense of the island. Neither the Wasp nor her escorts were damaged in accomplishing the trips but enemy planes which attacked the island suffered considerable losses when engaged by British planes which took off from the carrier. The Wasp is shown before she was commissioned in April, 1940

Sinkings Ahead of Shipbuilding, Vickery Says

By Thomas F. Reynolds
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery, vice chairman of the Maritime Commission, admitted yesterday that the Axis is sinking merchant vessels faster than the United Nations are replacing them, but disclosed that the Merchant Marine of the United States today is actually larger than it was before American entry into the war.

The submarine campaign, obviously, is taking a terrific toll in British, Canadian, Norwegian and Latin-American vessels along with United States ships, and Vickery admitted that total building of America, Canada and Great Britain, the three great producing nations, has not equaled all the tonnage sunk.

On the positive side of the picture, Vickery disclosed statistics which showed that booming American shipyards delivered 68 vessels totaling 731,900 deadweight tons in June and is roaring toward a level of 900,000 deadweight tons a month which Vickery says insures realization of President Roosevelt's request for delivery of eight million deadweight tons of new merchant ships in 1942.

Since January 1, he said, 288 ships of approximately 2,544,000 deadweight tons were delivered by American shipyards.

The June record, representing a 450 per cent increase over the best pre-Pearl Harbor ship production, reflects the miracle of mass maritime production under way in the shipyards. Vickery said the 731,900 deadweight tons delivered during June represented "a new world's record for steel ship construction, surpassing the mark established in May when 58 ships of 632,304 deadweight tons were delivered."

Translating this Herculean effort into other terms, Vickery revealed that some of the ships that carried bombs to the South Pacific for use by American airplanes in the battle of the Coral Sea had been laid down after Pearl Harbor.

"But," said Vickery, "the building has not replaced all the United Nations sinkings this year, although the American Merchant Marine is becoming larger."

He said he had no figures on ship production in United Kingdom yards, which admittedly is being pressed with the same urgency that ships are being built in American yards.

Canada, he said, is delivering "80,000 to 70,000 tons of merchant shipping a month, a production remarkable for a small country with no large shipyards." This production would add upward of 840,000 tons of new ships to the eight million plus deadweight tons that Vickery confidently expects American yards to roll down the ways by December 31. And the United Kingdom production will add a large unknown quantity to this cumulative total.

The eight million figure, however, is only the beginning of America's supreme production effort, Vickery pointed out. Mr. Roosevelt had demanded 15 million deadweight tons as the 1943 goal. New yards and enlarged ways which will make this goal possible through delivery of more than one millions tons monthly next year will not begin to come into production until late in 1942, he said.

U. S. Completes Big Naval Base In Ireland

By J. Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

United States Naval Base, Londonderry, Northern Ireland, Thursday, July 2.—The United States Navy has completed a giant operating base here guarding the western approaches of Britain in the critical battle of the Atlantic.

Londonderry in this war has become the counterpart of Queenstown (Cobh), in Eire, which during the first World war was base for as many as 92 United States warships at one time.

The Londonderry base is designed to refit, repair and supply destroyers and other light craft on Atlantic convoy duty. It was commissioned February 5, but is just now receiving its finishing touches—a job virtually completed seven months after United States entry into the war.

"It already has lifted a great burden off the convoy problem," said Commodore Ross Stewart, commander of the adjoining British Naval establishment.

Actual construction of the big base was started last year with Lend-Lease funds and more than 3000 Irish and American laborers, under direction of American Civil Engineers headed by Commander Henry P. Needham.

"Everything in the base down to the last pork chop or nut and bolt has been brought from the United States," Capt. William Larson of Annapolis and Chicago explained. "It's a bit of the United States transplanted."

The hundreds of men required to operate the base are housed in de luxe "Quonset Huts," prefabricated at home and put together here.

The first customer to limp into this new base on January 17 was the old and battered Gloucester fisherman, U. S. S. Albatross, a converted minesweeper now.

"She sort of stumbled in," Lieut. Comdr. J. A. Slusser, of Denver, repair department officer, said. The Albatros had run into one of the worst Atlantic storms of the winter and was battered almost into a sinking condition.

The Albatross was mended and is on the job again.

three-man panel appointed by the board in this dispute, which involves 157,000 workers. The report gave strong support to the union's demand for the wage increase and for union security in the form of maintenance of membership combined with check-off. It was generally conceded that any wage adjustment ordered by the board would also be extended to the country's 450,000 other steel workers.

Ernest S. Ballard, attorney for Inland, pointed out that if the board grants the request of the steel workers it would have to consider granting similar increases to other industries. If extended to other industries the country's total wage bill would rise nine billion dollars, he said. Demands for similar wage increases from 400,000 automobile workers and additional thousands of other war workers are already pending before WLB.

"I suggest very respectfully," Ballard said, "that it is the duty of the board to refer the evidence in this case to the Office of Price Administration to see whether the claim that this increase would be inflationary is valid.

Murray Criticizes

"A failure on the part of this board to obtain such advice and assistance from the Office of Price Administration would be in violation of its duty under the law and would result in the fantastic situation of one Government agency deliberately shutting its eyes to authoritative determination of fact by another Government agency in a field particularly entrusted to the latter.

"We have no doubt that if the Office of Price Administration is consulted in this matter, any suspicion of the panel as to our exaggeration of the dangers of inflation will be speedily dissipated."

Murray, who is president of the Steel Workers as well as the C. I. O., gave vent to months of suppressed rage at what he characterized as "the crazy quilt economic theory of the Office of Price Administration." Murray charged that Henderson had "initiated a campaign to combat any wage increases for the workers of the Nation regardless of how justified they may be."

"The control of cost of living through price fixing and democratic and equitable rationing received slight if any attention from the Office of Price Administration," Murray declared. "The time and energy of the officials of that agency have been primarily directed against the case of this union." (Prior to the announcement of the President's seven-point program to control inflation, Henderson had appeared before the WLB to advise that body against allowing possibly inflationary wage increases.)

"Tidbit Rationing Program"

Murray also attacked the "failure until recently" of price control, and OPA's "tidbit rationing program." OPA's attempt to limit increases to 5 per cent of present payrolls was branded "unfair" and "intolerant of the interests of the workers."

A near capacity crowd attended the hearing which was held in the Hall of Nations room of Hotel Washington. The union took three hours, with Murray, Lee Pressman, general counsel, and Harold Ruttenberg, research director, making the presentations. Inland and Bethlehem each consumed an hour, after which the hearing was adjourned. Today, Republic and Youngstown will receive an hour to complete their cases, followed by union and company rebuttals and interrogation of the parties by board members.

The companies directed their heaviest fire against the union security parts of the panel's report. They also attacked the proposed wage increase as unjustified from the standpoint of public policy and on the basis of the steel workers' present earnings.

J. M. Larkin, vice president of Bethlehem, reading a statement to the board from Eugene Grace, veteran president of Bethlehem, summed up as follows:

"After careful consideration of these demands, we conclude that the granting of them would be thoroughly bad for the company and its employes, and bad for the public . . . Believing them to be unsound and dangerous, we cannot conscientiously assume or accept any responsibility for the evil consequences that we fear will follow, if these demands are granted."

The union represenatives pointed to need for union security to permit the union officials to devote full time to increasing production for the war effort. Ballard attempted to refute this argument by stating that his company, Inland, was already operating at capacity and could not secure any additional production.

Edward L. Ryerson, chairman of the board of Inland, who appeared in person, and Grace in his prepared statement also asserted that a maintenance-of-membership order would deprive workers of personal liberty.

Defends Wage Demand

In defense of the union's wage demand, Ruttenberg presented figures to show that steel workers were entitled to an increase of $1.24 rather than $1 a day, to restore steel earnings to the position they formerly held with relation to those in durable goods.

Ballard attacked this stand on the ground that earnings in durable goods were high because of overtime. Steel on the other hand, does not work overtime, being an industry which operates continuously on a basic 40-hour shift, he pointed out.

The steel companies endeavored to show the board that steel wages were already high enough and that they should be stabilized at present levels to make the national stabilization program work.

"If an adjustment is granted to steel workers in this case, there will be no basis for denying a tidal wave of demands which will inundate and destroy all efforts at wage stabilization and price control," Ballard stated.

Murray countered by stating "the pronouncement today of a policy of wage freezing, in the light of prevailing economic factors, would be the equivalent of a military victory for Hitler."

Ruttenberg warned that the wage boost was needed to prevent a growing migration of steel workers into higher-paying industries, to "offset the debilitating effects of rising living costs on steel workers' real incomes," and to maintain maximum steel production.

Stotsenburg, 90 miles from Manila, to Corregidor.

Miss McDonald, in the nurses' quarters of the Stotsenburg Hospital, got her first taste of the war at 11:45 a. m. December 7, when she peered out of a window and said: "Oh, look girls, the boys are coming in from their morning flight."

Two minutes later windows shook and rooftops rocked as those planes dropped their bombs on Clark Field 2 miles away and war with Japan became a reality.

"The first wave lasted three-quarters of an hour," Miss MacDonald recalled, "and 10 minutes later the second wave of bombers flew over. I remember rushing up to a doctor to inquire: 'How many casualties?' He answered: 'Too many.'

Have Strong Stomachs

"In the hospital I saw six or seven doctors leaning over the rail, their stomachs unable to stand the horrible sights of broken, mangled bodies. Fortunately, the nurses stood up under it. Their stomachs must have been stronger.

"Do you know, I heard not one word of complaint from the hundreds of wounded men who lined the long porch of the hospital. The title of that book, 'The Wounded Don't Cry,' is more than true.

"We heard that about 85 men, most of them Air Corps men from Clark Field, were killed in the first two raids. Morale among the nurses was excellent though, in the face of the tremendous numbers of wounded. I never saw a tear, although the doctors and officers sometimes gave way.

"Naturally we were nervous, particularly at first, but we didn't have opportunities to think," Miss MacDonald added. "There simply was no time for tears. Ordinarily a nurse cares for ten patients, but 150 or 220 were not unusual there."

One Did Cry Once

Little Eunice Hatchitt, in her soft Texas drawl, admitted that she had cried once, when orders came to leave Bataan.

"That was the saddest moment of my life," she confessed. "None of us wanted to go, but we were under orders."

Blue-eyed Mary Lohr recalled an improvised hospital on Bataan where 5000 patients were lodged with only mosquito netting and rude canvas covering.

"We even ran out of mosquito netting as the defense of Bataan dragged on," she said. "Of course, our greatest shortages were in quinine and the sulfa drugs."

Juanita Redmond, only red-haired member of the group, told of her Christmas meals—corned beef hash and biscuits, which she had for both breakfast and lunch.

"I finally faced a mirror in Australia, after we were ordered out of Corregidor," Miss Redmond said, "and I had aged 10 years. We had no soap for shampoos and no other make-up facilities, so you can imagine how we looked."

Ready for foreign service again? The answer from all six was—yes!

Crack in Price Ceiling Blamed on Congress; Canned Fruits to Go Up 15 Per Cent

punch, Budget Director Harold D. Smith delivered a radio address in which he had this to say about Congress and inflation:

"Only the Congress has the power to make possible the stabilization of farm and food prices; it alone can enact those tax measures which are an essential element in the whole plan; its action is required to authorize such subsidies as are necessary for maximum production under the stabilization program.

"Thus far the President's (seven-point) program has not yet been fully implemented by the necessary legislation."

Run on Supplies Seen

Beyond the sound and fury of the official inflation battle, Henderson's announcement on higher prices for canned and dried fruit was certain to have another result, a housewives' run on supplies of these foods now on grocers' shelves.

OPA officials, however, said they believed the 1941 and earlier packs of canned fruits to be ample to meet the demand. They were unconcerned, furthermore, because, as Henderson observed, the prospective price rise will be confined to the incoming 1942 pack and present March price maxima will prevail until the new pack goes on sale.

Henderson declared that higher prices were the only alternative, under the circumstances, if the packers were to put up enormous quantities of fruits needed by the armed forces and the country's war allies. He said higher prices would be worked out on a formula soon to be announced and would affect these items, among others:

Canned peaches, pears, apricots, applesauce, fruit juices, raisins, and dried apples, peaches, apricots and pears.

"Serious Setback"

"Inability to complete successfully a plan that would have prevented an inflationary increase in retail prices of the 1942 canned and dried fruit pack is a serious setback to the battle being fought by OPA to maintain stability in the cost of living," Henderson declared.

"We cannot afford any such losses if we are to prevent a home front disaster that will importantly impair the prosecution of the war."

Higher prices, he emphasized, are not a "satisfactory solution." They translate into retail price increases, he added, "a burden that the Government might properly assume as a charge connected with the war." This burden, he emphasized, will not be shared equally, but "will fall heaviest on large families, especially in the low and middle income groups."

Meaney, Accused of Being Hague Tool, Wins Confirmation as Federal Judge

Vote Split Almost Exactly On Party Lines

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Thomas F. Meaney won Senate confirmation for his appointment to be Federal Judge for the District of New Jersey late yesterday after a two-day debate in which he was accused of being a "tool" of the political machine of Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City.

The vote for confirmation was 39 to 20, and was split almost exactly on partisan lines. Only Democrat voting against Meaney was Senator Herring of Iowa, and the only Republican voting for him was Senator Danaher of Connecticut.

Senator Norris (Independent) of Nebraska, led a parade of members in attacking the appointment, and but one came to his defense, Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, during the debate.

Meaney's approval overrode the protest of Governor Edison of New Jersey, former Secretary of the Navy in President Roosevelt's Cabinet, who told a Senate subcommittee that his objection to the appointment rested "on the principle that the judiciary should be free of the control of bosses and political machines."

Governor Edison asked "Is Mr. Meaney again to be the pawn by which Frank Hague seeks to work out a strategy to dominate the Federal courts also?"

Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio joined the floor fight against Meaney, declaring that the Senate would fail in its constitutional obligations if it were to act as a "rubber stamp" for President Roosevelt's nominations.

Barbour Joins Opposition

Mr. Burton offered to yield the floor to anyone who wished to make a speech in Meaney's favor and, when no takers appeared, charged that this indicated a plan for automatic agreement to the confirmation.

Later Senator Smathers (Democrat) of New Jersey, who sponsored the nomination, told the Senate that in the interest of speedy action he would deny himself "the pleasure of a two-hour speech I have prepared."

The Republican member from New Jersey, Senator Barbour, joined the opposition against Meaney but conceded there was nothing in Meaney's personal character which would make him unfit for the Federal judgeship.

Mr. Barbour joined, however, with Governor Edison in declaring that his State had suffered from the Hague domination, and that Meaney's appointment would extend that power into the Federal Courts.

Frank Hague Is the Issue

"Everyone who knows anything and is frank enough to speak his mind knows Frank Hague is the issue from start to finish," Barbour said. "Are we so naive we don't recognize the type of boss Frank Hague stands for—he is not only a boss but a political machine boss.

"We must root out that type of leadership. The time has come when that character of leadership is outmoded," said Mr. Barbour.

"The appointment is of tremendous interest to the entire country," he added. "There should be no suspicion of an appointee to such an office. But suspicion has raised its head. I can't escape the conclusion that an appointment of this kind will further undermine confidence in the judiciary."

Challenge to Meaney

Senator Wiley (Republican) of Wisconsin said that if Meaney were to be the "minion" of Mayor Hague, "this Senate should not under any consideration consent to such a nomination."

"If Mr. Meaney should be confirmed, I hope and pray that he will demonstrate his freedom from any sense of obligation to any man or any group," Senator Wiley said. "If we intrust the courts of this land to men who are the creatures of any segment of our society or of any boss, we are sabotaging or permitting the sabotage of the judiciary."

Senator Burton said that in acting on the Meaney nomination the Senate should be satisfied "beyond a reasonable doubt" that the appointment would add "to the confidence of the people of the United States, and particularly the people of New Jersey, in the Government, and their faith in equality under the law."

Bank Case Cited

Burton criticized Meaney for failing to sue depositors who withdrew $1,740,000 in "smart money" from the now defunct Jersey City Title Guaranty & Trust Co.—for which he was later counsel for the liquidation—10 days before the bank closed.

Senator McCarran declared that Meaney's role as liquidator had been found satisfactory by Leo Crowley of the Federal Deposit Insurance Co. and two State banking commissioners. McCarran also declared that there was nothing in the record "to bring Hague" into the appointment, and pointed out that both Senators Smathers and Barbour had conceded Meaney to be a man of "ability and high character."

100 Million Bushel Wheat Pool Set Up for War-Torn Areas

The United States and four other nations have decided to create a wheat pool of not less than 100 million bushels for the relief of famine in war-stricken areas, the State Department announced last night.

The decision was embodied in an agreement looking toward control of prices, production and exports of the bread grain. Signers of the pact were the United States, Great Britain, Canada, Australia and Argentina.

Worked out by the five countries participating in the Washington wheat meeting last April, the agreement became effective June 27, the date on which formal approval of the respective governments was transmitted.

First Step Toward Pact

Canada and the United Kingdom are to furnish 25 million bushels of wheat or flour to the relief pool, and the United States is to provide 50 million bushels. These nations, with Argentina, would furnish additional supplies, as required, on a basis to be worked out by the governments involved. Argentina's exact quota is to be determined later.

The memorandum agreement, approved by the five countries, is designed as a first step toward the conclusion, after the war, of a comprehensive wheat agreement between all countries concerned in the international wheat trade.

The agreement provides that as soon as conditions warrant, the United States shall convene a general international wheat conference. At this meeting the draft convention of an international agreement drawn up by the Washington wheat meeting will be submitted for consideration.

This would call for an international wheat council to fix basic minimum and maximum prices. It also would provide for lowering of barriers against imports and control of exports. If the draft convention were adopted the basic export quotas for Argentina, Australia, Canada and the United States would be 25 per cent, 19 per cent, 40 per cent and 16 per cent, respectively, of the estimated volume of international trade in wheat and flour in each quota year, less reasonable allowances for exports of other nations.

Production Control Mapped

Meanwhile, to get the relief pool going and to forestall the accumulation of wheat surpluses likely to create serious post-war difficulties, the United States, Canada, Australia and Argentina bind themselves under the agreement to adopt positive measures to control production.

The agreement also provides if a comprehensive international agreement has not been reached by the time the war ends the four exporting countries shall temporarily adopt the provisions of the draft agreement regulating wheat stocks and exports and that all five countries shall cooperate in stabilizing prices.

Price to Be Supported

Paragraph six of the memorandum of agreement stipulates that:

"Pending the conclusion of the (general international) conference contemplated above, the five countries, on the cessation of hostilities or such earlier date as they may agree, will regard as in effect among themselves the arrangements described in the attached draft convention for the control of the prices of wheat. The determination of prices required to be made in accordance with those arrangements will be made by unanimous consent. If no determination of prices has been made on the cessation of hostilities, the five countries will, pending such determination but for a period not exceeding six months, maintain as the export price of wheat the last price negotiated by the United Kingdom for a bulk purchase of wheat from the principal country of supply."

Appropriation Snarl Holds Up 1700 Relief Checks

District relief clients, who seem fated to go hungry a couple of days every summer, had their checks held up yesterday because Congress was so late in passing the 1943 District budget bill.

Although the appropriations bill was signed by the President on Monday, the Treasury hasn't yet turned over the $56,313,581 to the District. Ray Pilkerton, District auditor, hopes to get the money cleared and to the needy by late tomorow.

About this time last year the checks were delayed because the Welfare Board setup did not conform to Social Security standards. That caused a fight between the board and the Commissioners which is still going on with a Commissioners' bill to strip the board of its powers still before Congress.

Besides the 1700 general public assistance cases who were expecting their monthly checks yesterday, there were 275 blind persons and several hundred people responsible for the home care of children who were disappointed. Some 4500 aged dependents are due for checks at the end of the week.

Casey Seeks Senate Seat

Representative Casey (Democrat) of Massachusetts announced yesterday he would seek the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate in the Massachusetts primaries. If successful he would oppose Senator Lodge (Republican) who is a candidate for reelection.

212 Representatives in Congress Applied for Unlimited Gasoline Ration Cards Here, Unofficial Survey Shows

Members of the House of Representatives are right up with the Senators when it comes to holding "X" cards for unlimited gasoline rations, 'twould seem as reporters went into the second day of an unofficial survey of the District files yesterday.

Almost half of the House members, a total of 212, applied for unlimited gas cards, examination of the maze of some 15,000 names of motorists in the District who hold "X" cards showed yesterday. Of these 113 are Democrats, 98 are Republicans and one a Progressive.

The names of 46 Senators, also about half the membership, were found Tuesday when the files at Force School were opened to reporters for the first time, just nine days before a new registration nullifying the present ration card system begins.

This gave the two-day search an air of the "purely academic," although ration officials said that thorough examination of cases of seemingly "flagrant offenders" will continue. Such offenders would still be liable for the maximum 10 years imprisonment or $10,000 fine, whether their case came up after July 22 or not, officials stated.

Strange cases continued to come up in the examinatoin—which was necessarily sketchy due to the manner in which the thousands of applications were presented. The six feet of files mocked systematic search or drawing of unbiased conclusions.

A number of doctors received "X" cards for not one, but two or more passenger cars, some of which were owned by their wives. Some clergymen also made applications for more than one vehicle. Dentists cropped up under the "physicians" classification, where no dentists are supposed to be.

One dentists's wife, when questioned, said her husband sometimes made calls on his patients at their homes. Such calls, she admitted, average perhaps one a week.

A traveling drug salesman also checked the "physicians" column.

demonstrate that he is unable to do so. Ration books in this category are "B" books.

Meanwhile, there were these events yesterday bearing on the general picture of gasoline rationing and rubber:

1. The Office of Defense Transportation issued a general permit authorizing department stores, dairies, grocers and other merchants to make one additional delivery to handle the expected rush of pre-Independence Day business tomorrow. Specifically, the ODT order permits either one extra regular local delivery or one "call-back" delivery on the day preceding a national holiday when the holiday falls on a Saturday or on a Saturday when the holiday falls on the following Monday.

2. Hyman Zoslow, representing Washington shoe repair shops in the local phase of President Roosevelt's scrap rubber collection, asked the District Salvage Committee to make a special effort to convince Washingtonians that they ought to bring in more old rubber heels and soles. Washingtonians, he reasoned, probably would turn in a lot more of both items if they understood how worth salvaging they are. One pair of crepe soles, he said usually are good for one pound of 98 per cent pure rubber, while three pairs of heels weigh about a pound.

3. A summary of returns from Washington's lagging scrap rubber campaign showed the total collected thus far to be 215,000 pounds below the city's lowered quota. One million pounds have been salvaged through the oil companies, while 85,000 pounds have been collected by charities. A survey of collections by junk dealers is expected to be completed today.

4. Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District division of the American Automobile Association, announced a special contest for children under 18 with cash and other prizes for those bringing in the most scrap between now and July 10. Three cash prizes of $25, $15 and $10 were posted in addition to 35 prizes of athletic equipment.

A special depository for rubber has been set up on Seventeenth Street between Pennsylvania Avenue and H Street. It will be open from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m.

5. In another effort step up the drive's tempo, William R. Boyd, jr., chairman of the Petroleum Industry War Council, told the American people that the Fourth of July is a "perfect time" for citizens to search their homes, vacant lots, fields or swimming holes for "precious rubber." Three uninterrupted hours at the job of salvage, he said, probably would greatly enlarge the rubber stockpile.

6. War council officials cited official Department of Commerce estimates putting the National scrap supply between 500,000 and one million tons, as evidence that it should be possible for the campaign to collect far more than the 219,000-ton total recently reported to President Roosevelt.

OPA's gasoline rationing announcement yesterday was aimed at instructing motorists whose cars are used for pleasure and to get them to and from work, on obtaining rations in addition to the 192 gallons a year to which the "A" books entitle them.

Other types of gasoline consumers will be issued other types of books. "S" books will be issued for trucks, buses, hearses, ambulances, etc. "E" and "R" books will be issued for nonhighway use of gasoline. "D" books will go to motorcyclists.

In applying for a "B" or "C" book, OPA emphasized, it will be necessary for the motorist to join a car-sharing club or explain his failure to do so. Applications for supplemental rations must be signed by the motorist. In filling out the application form which is to be submitted to the motorists' local rationing board, the applicant will be required to state his occupation, the name of his employer, the purpose for which he needs additional driving mileage, mileage driven in the last 30 days, shortest distance from home to nearest public transport facility, distance necessary to be traveled by public transportation and shortest distance from home to job.

A "buffer zone" between rationed and unrationed areas in New York, Pennsylvania and West Virginia is under study by the Office of Petroleum Coordinator, Representative Cole (Republican) of New York said yesterday. Dealers in the zone, under the proposal, would be restricted to 75 per cent of their 1941 gas sales.

Engineer Killed, 75 Hurt in Train Crash

Cairo, Ga., July 1 (AP).—One engineer was killed and about 75 passengers injured today when the Atlantic Coastline train, the Southwind, and another train collided at Whigham near here.

None of the passengers of the Chicago-Miami train was reported seriously injured and only one passenger and one trainmen remained in a hospital here tonight.

Largest Propeller In World Designed For Flying Boat

New York, July 1 (AP).—The largest propeller type in the world has been designed by Curtiss-Wright for installation on a new flying boat of the United States Navy, it was announced today by G. W. Vaughn, president of Curtiss-Wright Corp., with the approval of the War Department.

Designed for a new twin-engined flying boat but especially suited for equipping military and naval aircraft types which operate at extremely high altitudes where the air has only one-quarter the density it has at sea level, the new propeller has three blades measuring 18 feet from tip to tip.

The prop is larger than those installed on either the Army's new 32-ton Douglas B-19 bomber, world's largest landplane, or on the Navy's new giant Martin "Mars," the world's largest flying boat. Insofar as is known, no Axis plane is equipped with a prop of any size approaching this new 18-foot design.

THESE ARE THE FACTS About Wartime Bus Travel

To All Wartime Travelers:

In normal years, vacation travel reaches a peak over the 4th of July week-end. This year there will be a tremendous increase -- with trips necessary to the war effort largely replacing pleasure trips. So we suggest -- don't make bus trips during this holiday, if you can avoid it.

Perhaps you have heard confusing comments and rumors about travel in general, and are wondering just how Greyhound has altered its service to meet wartime conditions -- what effect certain revisions will have on the trips you must make -- what you can do to help.

The fundamental fact is that Greyhound and other bus companies are organizing all the resources of the industry to make the most of every bit of equipment, every bit of experience -- to help win the war. Everything else is secondary. The buses' big job today is to carry selectees to examination centers, men in uniform on furloughs, war workers to jobs, civilian travelers on essential trips -- and to be ready at all times for urgent troop movements.

To accomplish this task efficiently, Greyhound has eliminated Expresses and Limiteds, many "extra sections", certain schedules that are not used by enough passengers, all unnecessary duplication of service. Full cooperation is being given to the Office of Defense Transportation in its program to conserve vital rubber.

At present there are no Government restrictions on travel by bus -- but on some occasions you may be inconvenienced, crowded or delayed. If you are, please be lenient! You can help greatly -- by traveling on mid-week days, rather than on crowded week-ends -- by avoiding rush periods and holidays -- by getting information and tickets in advance -- and by taking as little baggage as possible.

There's a big job to be done!--let's all help.

Very truly yours,

E. E. Wickman

Pepper Presses for Action on Raid Benefits Bill

Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida late yesterday sought assurance that the Senate will act before any midsummer recess on his bill to provide cash benefits for civilians injured by enemy attack.

Majority Leader Barkley in discussing possible recess late this month told Mr. Pepper on the Senate floor that no major legislation would be left without action, but indicated that only the two remaining appropriation bills, for Agriculture, and war agencies including the OPA, come into the "must" class.

Earlier Senator Pepper, testifying on his bill before a Senate Finance Subcommittee, said civilian defense workers who assume obligations and duties "different than ordinary civilians" should be placed in a special class and made eligible for Federal benefits if they are injured in line of duty.

The subcommittee, which also heard testimony from James M. Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, and others, will meet again at 10:30 a. m. today to hear representatives of the War and Navy Department, insurance companies and municipal officials.

Mr. Pepper's bill would provide for medical treatment and cash benefits ranging from $10 to $85 a month for civilians or their dependents who suffer hardship through injury, death or capture resulting from enemy action. It would also extend the benefits to Civilian Defense Corps members sustaining injury or disease as a result of their official duty, and would provide for Federal relief to communities damaged by enemy attack.

Landis told the subcommittee he had received reports that seven persons had been killed and 32 persons seriously injured as a result of their civilian defense activities, and he said the lack of some form of compensation for injury was hindering the recruitment of volunteers for hazardous civilian defense occupations such as auxiliary fire fighting.

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio, a member of the subcommittee, said he did not believe volunteers would hold back because of the lack of some form of compensation for injury, but that they might hold back because they were not paid.

Landis said, however, that "it isn't the desire for pay" that takes men into the civilian defense work, but that many of the eligible men were hesitant to risk injury that would make them unable to support their families.

Little light was thrown on the question of the cost to the Government in yesterday's hearing.

William Haber, specia assistant to the Director of the Budget, said that if the counry is not bombed the cost would be slight, "if the country is bombed," the cost would be "anyone's guess."

Congress Receives Roosevelt's Report on Use of Secret Funds

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

In a special report, President Roosevelt yesterday gave Congress an accounting of his expenditure of $239,500,000 secret emergency funds since June 1940.

Large sums were spent to suppress subversive radio activities in this country in connection with Hitler's submarine campaign against American shipping in the Western Hemisphere and for the development of air and military bases in Latin-American countries.

Eighty-seven per cent of the total was allocated to the Army, Navy, Maritime Commission and Federal Loan agency, the President said.

"Through this means the construction of cantonments and hemisphere bases was started, the building of ships expedited and the stockpiles of wool and copper procured," the President reported.

Important among the expenditures was 52 million dollars for secret naval bases in Western Hemisphere countries; 12 million dollars for purchase of Australian wool to insure uniforms for our fighting forces; eight millions for development of air, rail and highway transportation systems in Latin-American countries, and $36,500,000 for construction of merchant ships along with six millions for repairs of vessels damaged by enemy action.

In order to speed work on the transisthmian highway in Panama, necessary for the defense of the Canal, the President allocated $3,675,000.

The Office of Emergency Management, which is directly under the President, was given $15,014,184. The Coordinator of Information received $1,125,000.

The report, covering outlays up to May 31, does not include secret funds recently voted by Congress for the President. Altogether the funds now aggregate $506,459,000, including an additional 100 million dollars carried in the omnibus supply bill passed yesterday by the House and now pending in the Senate.

"It is highly important that the President have at his disposal an emergency fund with flexibility of expenditure and adequate in amount to meet the constantly unforeseen emergencies in connection with the war," Congress was advised by the House Appropriations Committee that recommended the increase in the funds.

In the report it was shown that large amounts were being used in counter-espionage activities, the secret service as well as the foreign service in Latin-American countries were given nearly a million dollars together. Provision was made for additional officers at foreign posts, largely in the American republics. For confidential investigations in connection with national defense, $400,000 was expended, while a half million went for "unforeseen emergencies of a confidential character."

The Arsenal in the Clover

HERE WAS THE PICTURE, three months ago. Strewn around millions of American farms was a wealth of scrap metal. From the steel mills came a constant cry for scrap. But the farm scrap didn't come in. It was scattered far and wide, hard to find, expensive to gather. No system existed to collect it.

So we went to the 8,500 Harvester dealers in rural communities, asking them to help get in the farm scrap. The whole field organization of our company tackled the job. Promotional and publicity campaigns were launched to carry the story to the farmers.

Civic committees were organized to help. Dealers hauled scrap in their trucks. They persuaded their farmer friends to bring along a load whenever they came to town. They provided a place to dump scrap. When a good big pile was ready, the nearest scrap dealer was called in to buy. The steel mills got that scrap. They will continue to get it!

RESULT: More than 1,350,000 tons of scrap iron and steel collected from the fields and barn yards of American farms and farm communities. And more coming every day.

That's 35,000 railroad carloads of scrap. Melted down, it's enough to build 30,000 medium tanks for the Army. Or 100 cargo vessels for the battle of ocean transport.

The farmers and businessmen of rural America have revealed an iron mine in the fence corner—an arsenal in the clover.

This job is being done as volunteer war work—done by men who ask no reward, done not only by Harvester dealers and personnel but by dealers of competing companies, by local merchants and organizations. Anyone who wants to help is welcome. And they do want to help.

Nobody in the farm equipment industry makes a dime on scrap. We don't. The farm equipment dealers don't. All money from scrap sales goes to the farmers who bring in the scrap. The work of organizing, collecting and marketing is free.

Now this plan of farm-scrap collection is being carried forward by the entire industry through the Farm Equipment Institute and dealers' associations, with everybody boosting the scrap along. It is closely coordinated with the salvage plans of the W. P. B. and the American Industries Salvage Committee.

THE POINT IS: The producers of America, men who know how to do things—farmers, operators of small businesses, representatives of large business—working together, are doing another good job to help win the war. They are licking one more problem that some said was difficult and some said was impossible.

In Tokyo, in Berlin and Rome, they're finding out what it means to war with a nation where people, like motors, are self-starting.

2 D. C. Officers, Va. Marine Held by Japs

Two officers from the District and a noncommissioned officer from Quantico, Va., are among 111 American sailors and Marines who are held as prisoners of war by the Japanese at Shanghai, it was announced by the War Department yesterday.

The officers are Lieut. Col. Luther A. Brown, U. S. M. C, of 2514 Fourteenth Street Northwest, and Comdr. Leo Cromwell Thyson of the Navy Medical Corps, whose sister, Mrs. Blanche Thyson Harrison, lives at 1673 Columbia Road Northwest.

William A. Lee, chief Marine gunner, of 227 Fourth Avenue, Quantico, is also listed among the prisoners.

The 111 men held in Shanghai boosts the officially-announced total of American prisoners in Japan to 1370. The list, eighth sent by the Japs through the American Red Cross, showed that 72 of the newly-listed prisoners were serving at Peiping. The remaining 39 were at Tientsin.

LIEUT. COL. LUTHER A. BROWN

COMMANDER LEO C. THYSON

Hasn't Heard of Promotion

Colonel Brown, who was serving at Tientsin, very likely has not heard of his recent promotion from the rank of major, his son, Luther A. Brown, jr., said last night. News of his appointment as a lieutenant colonel has not been transmitted to Shanghai as far as his wife and son know.

Young Brown leaves for New York this week to join the Naval Reserve.

Colonel Brown served as an enlisted man in the Navy during World War I and after the Armistice he attended the Naval Academy, from which he was graduated in 1921.

He transferred to the Marine Corps as a second lieutenant and after service with the Second Marine Brigade in Nicaraga in 1926, 1927 and 1928, received another decoration, the Second Nicaraguan Campaign Medal. He also hold the Expeditionary Medal and the Yangtze Service Medal.

Following his term of duty at Nicaragua, he served briefly at Marine Headquarteds in Washington and then was transferred to the Fourth Regiment of Marines in Shanghai, where he served until 1932.

Captured in December

Eight years later he returned to the Asiatic station and commanded the Marines at Tientsin until the garrison was captured by the Japanese in December.

Commander Thyson, recently chief Medical Corps officer of the international settlement in Peiping, was serving at Tientsin at the time of his capture.

A member of the third generation of native Washingtonians, Commander Thyson received his medical education at George Washington University medical school, from which he was graduated in 1916. Earlier he had received his diploma from Western High School.

He entered the naval service as an assistant surgeon in the Naval Reserve in December, 1916, and was appointed as a lieutenant junior grade in April, 1917. He received his commission as a commander in June, 1934.

He has served in the Naval dispensary here, on the U. S. S. Kentucky, at the Portsmouth (Va.) Navy Yard, with the naval forces in Europe, on the U. S. S. Henderson, and at the Naval Hospital, Puget Sound, Bremerton, Wash. He was assigned to duty with the Marine detachment at Peiping in October, 1940.

Before the Far Eastern situation became critical, Commander Thyson had planned to have his sister, widow of Maj. William Sloan Harrison, U. S. M. C., join him in China.

He also has two brothers here, George Thyson of 1915 Calvert Street Northwest and Paulus Thyson of 1445 Park Road Northwest.

Lee, chief Marine gunner, is a native of Massachusetts and enlisted in the Marine Corps when he was 17, during World War I. Made a sergeant a year later, he received the Victory Medal with France clasp.

He also iserved at Nicaragua and received the Navy Cross on two occasions and the Cross of Valor. With his wife and daughter, Edith Ellen, now 4 he sailed for the Far East in July, 1939. The family returned when women and children were evacuated in November, 1940, and Mrs. Lee, who now lives Quantico, has a daugnter, Nancy, 16 months old, who has never seen her father.

The Lees were at Quantico for four years before their trip to the Far East. Mrs. Lee's father, Capt. Calvin Lloyd, also is in the Marine Corps and is now stationed at Quantico.

Marine Corps personnel serving at Peiping also held prisoner includes the following Virginians: Corpl. Irving N. Akers, whose father, James L. Akers, lives at Rural Retreat; Sergt. William A. Kahl of Yorktown, and Robert L. Williams, pay clerk, of Strasburg.

Dan Walmer, pharmacist's mate in the Navy, served at Tientsin and also is interned by the Japanese at Shanghai. His wife, Mrs. Patricia Lena Walmer, lives at Norfolk.

Objectors Get Better Treatment

Conscientious objectors are being treated better in this war than in the last, Dr. Milton I. Baldinger told the War Law Institute last night at National University.

Dr. Baldinger, author of a book on the constitutionality and other phases of the Selective Service system, added that conscientious objectors are not relieved from the obligation to bear arms pursuant to the constitution, but only because it is in accord with the policy of Congress to so relieve them.

Married men with dependents, who are in nonessential activities, probably will be called when the impending serious shortage of man power begins to pinch, he said.

The other speaker, Col. Hamilton Young, commandant of the Judge Advocate General's School, declared "the system of military justice in our Army requires an appreciation for the point of view of the soldier, and protection from unreasonable and unexcessive punishment. Members of the Judge Advocate General's department strive to carry out this policy."

Waller Slated to Die Today; Stay of Execution Sought

By the Associated Press

After an extended conference with Justice Department officials, spokesmen for the Workers Defense League and other organizations last night announced they had urged that President Roosevelt appeal personally for a stay of execution for Odell Waller, 25-year-old Negro, scheduled to die in the electric chair in Richmond today.

A delegation representative said the group had urged Wendell Berge, Assistant Attorney General, and Victor Rotnem, chief of a civil rights section, to report to the President through the attorney general the feeling of the delegation that the Waller case "was a symbol of whether or not justice was to be given to the Negro people."

Waller is awaiting death in the electric chair this morning for slaying his white employer, Oscar Davis, a tenant farmer.

He was first convicted in September, 1940, and the verdict has been repeatedly challenged without success in State and Federal Appellate Courts.

Albert Hamilton, of the Workers Defense League, and Frank Reeves of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, agreed that the only means open to save Waller's life was for the President to ask Gov. Colgate W. Garden jr., for a stay of execution.

"The one final step," they said, "would be for the President publicly to intervene. If the President fails to do this it means that Waller is unable to exercise his last legal hope."

After the conference at the Department of Justice, the delegation sought to obtain a hearing by Vice President Wallace.

Asked if their case was closed after the Justice Department conference, the group declared: "It won't be closed until Waller goes to the chair."

Darden Refuses Sixth Reprieve

Richmond, Va., July 1 (AP).—Gov. Colgate Darden today refused a sixth reprieve for Odell Waller, 25-year-old Negro sharecropper who is to die in Virginia's electric chair tomorrow for the slaying of Oscar Davis, a tenant farmer. The Governor refused last night to commute the sentence.

Outwardly sober and emotionless, Waller asked one of his attorneys today to present to the press his last statement.

"I won't be able to see it," Waller said, referring to the 10-page statement he had scrawled on foolscap paper, "but I want it in there."

Waller in his statement said:

"I realize I haven't lived so upright in the past with the laws of the good Lord and with the laws of the land. . . .

"I have asked God to forgive me and I feel that He has. . . .

"This is Odell Waller speaking. I axident (accidentally) fell an some good people tried to help me.

"Others did everything they could against me so the Governor & coats (courts) don't no (know) the true facts."

He is scheduled to die at 8 a. m.

John P. Finerty of New York, counsel for the Negro and representative of the Workers Defense League, made the request by telegraph to Governor Darden who was attending a dedication of buildings at the Norfolk Navy Yard today.

Finerty said he needed time to apply to the United States Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari

Two Boys Stricken With Spotted Fever

Two more cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever were reported to the Health Department yesterday, bringing the season's total to date to three. The new patients are young boys, 4 and 6 years old, of Brandywine and Chevy Chase, Md.

There were only four cases reported all summer in 1941, and the first of these did not occur until July 26. Because of the head-start this season, Health Officer George C. Ruhland urged all persons spending much time in the open to be especially careful of tick bites. As it takes about eight hours for the insect to pass the infection into the body, a careful examination and cleansing twice a day is sufficient, he says. Any tick discovered should be removed with tweezers and the spot of contact painted with tincture of iodine.

The first case reported this year, a 40-year-old man, was also contracted in nearby Maryland, so persons in that region are urged to be particularly careful.

Mrs. Lionel Atwill Revealed as Holder Of Two 'X' Cards

By the United Press

Mrs. Lionel Atwill, wife of the movie star and former wife of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, last night was disclosed as the holder of two of the coveted "X" gasoline ration cards.

In her application for two cards—one for a Packard, the other for a Cadillac—Mrs. Atwill said one car was needed for the transportation of materials and equipment for construction, or for mechanical, electrical, structural or highway maintenance or repair services, or for transportation of workers to enable them to render such services. The other car, she certified, was needed in the performance of religious duties.

When reporters brought this to light, Director Whitney Leary of the District of Columbia office of Price Administration Office said he would investigate.

Mrs. Atwill registered first as Mrs. Louise Atwill, 13515 D'Kate Drive, Pacific Palisades, Calif., in the transportation classification and second as Mrs. Lionel Atwill, same address.

Robertson and W. M. Smart.

Burdick, supported by the Non-Partisan League, took an early lead for one of the two nominations and never lost it while Lemke, Progressive Republican candidate, held onto the winning second position likewise nearly from the start.

Robertson was supported by the league while Smart was a Progressive candidate.

With 2082 of 2262 precincts in, Burdick had 56,831 votes, Lemke 48,544, Robertson 45,657 and Smart 24,926.

Heroic Lexington's Chief Predicts Smashing Victory

Port Huron, Mich., July 1 (AP).—An Allied offensive "in the not too distant future" that will "rock the enemy back on their heels" was predicted today by the commander of the ill-fated aircraft carrier Lexington.

Returning here to his boyhood home for a few days respite, Rear Admiral Frederick C. Sherman spoke with confidence of battles ahead and said the naval defeats suffered by the Japanese had resulted in "a decided change in the balance of power in the Pacific."

He said the Battle of the Coral Sea erased any concern he had had that "the American Race was becoming decadent."

Admiral Sherman praised particularly the air arm which, he said, was "the best in the world."

"You should see them," he said. "It makes you proud to be an American."

He was elected to a full two-year term in 1940, defeating former Judge Robert F. Duer (Republican) of Somerset County.

Beard Wins Divorce, Children Put in Grandparents' Custody

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Calif., July 1.—Damon Beard, 26-year-old University of California astronomy instructor, was awarded a hotly contested divorce decree today from his brunette wife, Virginia, after a lengthy trial packed with charges and countercharges of marital misconduct.

Beard's witnesses testified his 21-year-old wife carried on a series of romances involving soldiers, sailors, marines, a Nevada telephone lineman and a Berkeley glass blower.

Mrs. Beard, who agreed she had kissed a few of the men mentioned and had written affectionate letters to the telephone lineman, testified, however, there was nothing wrongful or serious about the affairs. Witnesses for her accused Beard of associating with other women.

Judge James Quinn gave custody of the two young Beard children to neither of the parties.

Terming Beard a "young man whose whole life is bound up in the covers of books," and Virginia as "bright, intelligent and still youthfull," Judge Quinn concluded:

"The court finds neither of them has developed the sense of responsibility which would enable it to grant them care of the children."

Ronald, 1, and Rosalyn, 2, were placed under temporary custody of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence M. Beard of Berkeley, the paternal grandparents.

At that juncture, Mrs. Rose Lang, Virginia's mother, rose from her seat screaming, "My God You can't do that." She fell to the courtroom floor, sobbing and hysterical, and was taken away in an ambulance.

Judge Quinn said Virginia had "married too early and learned too late about proper conduct," and that neither she nor Beard had yet acquired the responsibility of parenthood.

"If the mother can, in the future, show to this court both by her conduct and her financial standing that she is ready to assume the care and custody of these children, the court will consider turning them over to her," the judge asserted.

The divorce decree was awarded on the ground of cruelty.

Hope Is Seen For Settlement Of Taxi Row

A sudden reversal of position by Public Utilities Commissioner Gregory Hankin yesterday promised to settle the current taxcab dispute and to bring about an amicable settlement of the differences between the cab union and the P. U. C.

In a statement to the press, Hankin stated that he welcomed the rehearing of the rate case, which he only granted after congressional intercession, because:

1. It would reveal whether someone else beside the taxi companies and individuals could represent the drivers.

2. It would indicate whether the new rate system accomplished the intended purpose or had actually been made more complicated.

3. It would show whether the earnings of the driver would be increased or the new system "by some mistake, lowered the earnings of taxicab drivers."

4. It would give the P. U. C. a chance to take into account the rising costs of operation of cabs—which Hankin admitted had increased since the hearing that determined the rates.

While the P. U. C. even after the rehearing, might remain convinced of the desirability of the new rates as ordered, District Building observers considered this statement a marked concession on the part of Hankin, who had never before admitted any doubt that the new system was easily understood and advantageous to the drivers.

"Public Entitled to Know"

In making these points, Hankin said: "In view of all that has been said, both true and false, concerning the taxicab situation, my friends have urged me to answer the misrepresentations and to state my position.

"I do not think it is proper for a public official to engage in controversies of this character. Therefore, I intend to let all that has been said go unanswered. However, the public is entitled to know my position with reference to the taxicab situation, for it seems rather odd that I, who have been responsible for getting increases in rates and other advantages to taxicab drivers, should now appear in opposition to their welfare."

Edwin A. Glenn, president of the cabdrivers union, said, "The drivers are ready and willing to forget all that has been said and will be glad to listen to any proposal of the PUC for zones and rates that would be fair to the public and drivers.

"I think that this can be done quickly, without long drawn out hearings involving unnecessary expense and many witnesses. All that is necessary is for the PUC to contact my office, and we will arrange on an hour's notice an initial conference to set the day and time of working out this problem."

John H. Royer, jr., president of Premier Cab and of the combined cab companies, said the association and company officials had stayed out of the controversy, which seemed to involve only the union and the PUC, but that it was now time for them to take some stand. This action, he said, would follow a conference of cab officials this afternoon.

Horrors of Nazi Rule Bared By Minister to Luxembourg

"The Germans could find no Quisling in Luxembourg," Dr. George P. Waller, United States minister to the Grand Duchy when it was occupied by the Nazis, told members of the Kappa Gamma sorority at the Raleigh Hotel last night.

Dr. Waller, who spent 10 years in Luxembourg, described the little country as "an antechamber of Paradise," and gave a detailed description of the horrors suffered by the population after the Nazis' arrival.

Conditions were far more peaceful just after the German army arrived, Dr. Waller said, than after Nazi party control had been established.

Because no Quisling presented himself, Dr. Waller said, the Nazis sought out an old German professor who had been teaching nearby and was "happy to stab in the back a happy and innocent land."

This man formed the nucleus of the Luxembourg Nazi Party, but when no others joined him, the gestapo released 38 life-termers from prison to "convince" the populace to join the party, Dr. Waller added.

"In addition, 91 millionaires, many of them steel barons, were rounded up and forced to pledge allegiance to Naziism at the threat of dire punishment in the coal mines of Poland, and of injury to their families. A few attempted to escape and some were successful, but others lived in dishonor by signing, in order to save something of their country."

Dr. Waller also saw the effects of R. A. F. raids over Cologne in 1941, and observed that although no announcements of fatalities was made, 26 very high Nazi officials who warranted public funerals were said to have "died suddenly during the night."

"A German victory will never come," Dr. Waller predicted, "and the children of Luxembourg are being raised, not to believe in Naziism, but in the manner of their forefathers."

Officer Has Little Job Done on His Teeth in Plane

Presumably Lieut. Col. Walter E. Nicol is in Washington and, presumably, his teeth are in swell shape after a bit of high-flying dental work in a plane en route to Bolling Field from the Wellston (Ga.) Air Depot.

The Associated Press tells the story that Colonel Nicol, suddenly transferred to Washington, remembered that Maj. J. Nick Stribling, post dental surgeon, hadn't finished manipulating his molars. A conference brought a characteristically decisive Army decision and when the colonel's plane took off Major Stribling and his tools did too.

The job, according to Wellston reports, was finished high in the clouds, but that's all we know. The Army Air Force public relations office, the War Department public relations office and Bolling Field had the same answer—"We have no information on that."

Hours Listed For New Clinics

Announcement was made at the office of the county health department at Rockville yesterday that two new venereal disease clinics have been opened in the county, one at the Silver Spring Health Center and the other at the River Road School. The Silver Spring clinic will be open every Tuesday at 8 p. m. and the other every Thursday at the same hour.

The health department has also announced that the dental program in the county is continuing throughout the summer. The county dentist, Dr. Roy H. Bridger, is taking the dentist trailer to various communities and does corrections for children who cannot afford private dentists, it was stated.

Man Admits Rape Of Teacher, 66

Terryville, Conn., July 1 (AP).—State Police Commissioner Edward J. Hickey said today that Peter Gurski, 25, farmhand, confessed that he strangled Miss Nellie Bourke, 66, retired school teacher, after he had raped her.

Hickey said the farmhand was being held without bond.

Police said that Miss Bourke visited relatives last night, and decided to walk home after missing the last bus.

"Mercy Slayer" Innocent

Riverhead, N. Y., July 1 (AP).—A jury late today found comely Mrs. Edith Reichert, 29, innocent "by reason of legal insanity" in the "mercy slaying" of her brother, George Horne, who was a patient in a mental institution.

Young Mother, Babe in Arms Hit by Truck

A mother with her 16-month-old son in her arms was severely hurt yesterday when she was felled by a backing delivery truck in the 1400 block H Street Northeast.

The mother, Mrs. Ervel Wesley, 21, 1112 Staples Street Northeast, was crossing to board a streetcar, carrying young Paul, when the truck knocked them both to the ground, police said.

At Casualty Hospital, Mrs. Wesley was treated for cuts and bruises and a fractured pelvis. The child escaped with bruises to his head, but was admitted to the hospital.

The driver, Raymond Love, Negro, 21 Q Street Northwest, was charged with backing without caution and posted $300 bond. He will be arraigned in Traffic Court after the woman recovers.

Lucy Johnson, 20, of Silver Spring, Md., received head injuries when she was struck by an automobile at Twelfth and F Streets Northwest. She was taken to Emergency Hospital.

At an inquest at the District Morgue, Roland S. Padgett, 20, 1810 Minnesota Avenue Southeast, was exonerated in the traffic death of Robert Gomes, 14, of 36 Sixteenth Street Southeast.

The boy was fatally injured Monday in the 200 block Tennessee Avenue Northeast, when his toy wagon swerved into the path of Padgett's truck. He was the District's fifty-sixth traffic victim this year.

Nazis Pooh-Pooh Second Front Talk

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), July 1 (AP).—"Churchill's second front does not interest us any more," Nazi Propaganda Minister Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels wrote today in the newspaper Das Reich.

"We are only in doubt as to whether we should rather wish that he should try it or not try it," he continued. "Whether his propaganda for it, is only talk or whether it is in earnest appears to us today, more than ever, of little importance."

Pooches Enlist

25,000 Dogs Patrol Shore Of Japan

By J. Norman Lodge
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, July 1.—If you happen to miss your pet pooch in the next few weeks don't fret, perhaps he's run away to enlist in the Army, or, if one of the water type spaniels, maybe he's signed his papers in the Navy or Coast Guard.

For dogs, already widely in use in defense plants as auxiliary guards, now are being sought by "Dogs for Defense, Inc." And at the specific request of Quartermaster Gen. Edmund Gregory, U. S. A.

The Army alone is seeking 2000 trained sentry dogs.

Today, Lieut. Comdr. McClelland Barclay, famous illustrator and dog fancier, advocated their use to patrol beaches to detect spies and saboteurs.

"I've already communicated with Admiral Robert Stanley of the Coast Guard," Barclay said, "and he is interested."

Harry I. Caesar, dog fancier and member of the American Kennel Club, said that "long before Pearl Harbor he knew by transfers of papers, that 25,000 thoroughbred dogs had been transferred from Germany to Japan. Now we know why—to do sentry duty along Japan's rugged coastal beaches."

The Animal Trainers Association met here today to take their first steps in mobilizing an army of animals, not confined to dogs, to aid the war effort.

"Along our coast," Barclay said, "fog often dims out the beaches. It is a well-known fact that in this type of weather the senses of smell and hearing become more acute. Long after the patrolling Coast Guardsman becomes fogbound, dogs could be utilized.

"Each dog could literally replace 50 Coast Guardsmen at this type of work and relieve the men for other duties."

Defense Sidelights

War-Time Protection of Capital In Hands of 5-Man Committee

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate a resolution setting up a five-man commission to supervise wartime protection and repairs of the Capitol, House and Senate Office Buildings and their related plants.

The board would be composed of the chairman and ranking minority member of the Public Buildings and Grounds Committees of the House and Senate, with Capitol Architect David Lynn acting as executive officer.

Its job would be to direct the expenditure of already-appropriated funds providing for protection of the buildings against attack or sabotage, for repairing the Capitol roofs, and for the reconstruction of any damaged structures.

Chairman Lanham (Democrat) of Texas of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, reported the bill, explaining that it merely set up machinery through which the Capitol Architect could act under the guidance and supervision of the Congress instead of on his own responsibility.

'Share Your Car' Plan Grows in Apartment House

In response to the rubber and gasoline conservation drive, residents of the Westchester Apartments, 4000 Cathedral Avenue, Northwest, met last night to formulate a "share your car" plan.

Under direction of Mrs. George Thorpe, chairman of the women's safety committee of the American Automobile Association, transportation questionnaires, distributed by the Consumer's Interest Committee of the Office of Civilian Defense, were filled out.

A transportation coordinating committee of five, headed by Mrs. Lancelot Sukert, was established to synchronize groups living at the Westchester.

Nazis' New Gun Two Stories Tall, Really Is 'Mansize'

Berlin (from German Broadcasts), July 1 (AP).—Germany's new and huge gun, disclosed for the first time in the Sevastopol siege, was given credit for part of the "quick success" there, the news agency D. N. B. said today. It said the gun blasted even the thickest concrete walls to atoms.

The Berlin radio described as follows some of the guns "seen in the latest newsreels" of the fighting:

"One recognizes that there are two different types: One a very heavy mortar and one a very heavy railway long barrel gun.

"The latter has, so to speak, two stories, shells and cartridges being hoisted to the upper floor.

"With both guns, shells and cartridges are brought up mechanically. The size of the shells and the length of the cartridges reveal that these guns surpass anything used in the last World War.

"Nothing is said about their caliber, but one can gain an impression of its size when one sees the gunner lean with the top part of his body into the cannon's mouth to perform some task."

District Delegate Bill Up to House Unit

Measure, Introduced By Paddock, Sent to Judiciary Committee

By Robert W. Harvey
Post Staff Writer

A bill restoring the District's right to send an elected delegate to the floor of Congress, a right which the city lost 68 years ago, was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Paddock (Republican) of Illinois.

Trimmed to absolutely essential provisions, the bill sets forth the qualifications for such a delegate and his electors, invests him with the rights and privileges now granted to Territorial delegates, and prescribes a nomination procedure.

Aside from designating an election day—the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November of every even-numbered year—it leaves election regulations up to the Commissioners.

Sent To Judiciary Group

The bill was immediately referred for study to the House Judiciary Committee, which is headed by Representative Sumners (Democrat) of Texas, coauthor with Senator Capper (Republican) of Kansas, of a constitutional amendment which would have virtually given the District the status of Statehood.

Chances appeared slim, however, that the proposal would be acted upon until late summer or fall. Though Sumners was out of town and could not be reached, it was reported that his committee would be able to dispose of only a few essntial war measures before Congress recesss for the summer. It has been rumored that Congressmen will try to start their vacation in mid-July.

Under the bill's provisions, the delegate would have to be at least 25 years old, a United States citizen for a least seven years and a resident of the District possessed of requisite voting qualifications.

Candidate, Voting Qualifications

Candidates would be nominated on petitions signed by at least a thousand qualified voters and filed with the Commissioners 30 days before the election date. A filing fee of $200 would be required.

The qualifications for voting set forth in the bill are as follows:

"All citizens of the United States, above the age of 21 years, who have been actual residents of the District of Columbia continuously for one year immediately preceding the election, and who have been actual residents continuously for 30 days next preceding the election in the precinct in which they vote, except such persons as are non compos mentis or have been convicted of infamous crimes, shall be qualified to vote for the election of a delegate from the District of Columbia."

The establishment of polling places, balloting methods, regulations and precinct divisions would be determined by the commissioners, but the election is made subject to the Federal Corrupt Practices Act of 1925.

Holds Office Two Years

The delegate elected would hold office for two years. Though he would not be eligible to vote, he would have the privilege of the House floor and hold a Congressional rank. His job, according to Paddock, would be to keep the Congress informed of public opinion in the city, introduce District legislation, and in general convey the desires of the District to the Congress. Paddock predicted that he would be able to take over much of the work now done by the Senate and House District Committees.

"Many members with whom I have discussed this proposal feel that it should be enacted," he declared. "They see no reason why this large community of American citizens should remain disfranchised. They recognize the advantage to the House in having on its floor an elected spokesman familiar with Washington problems."

Paddock, as well as other Members of Congress, expressed the hope that the authorization of a delegate would be only a first step in enfranchising the District, foreshadowing postwar creation of a local self-government.

His proposal was indorsed last week, a few days after he announced his intention of introducing a bill for a District delegate, by the Federation of Citizens Associaions.

Yesterday the District Communist Party added its support, through a statement by Martin Chancey, city secretary. Chancey termed the bill "not only a step that will extend democracy to the residents of the Nation's Capital but an act that will strengthen the war effort."

Hundley Opens Defense in OPA Evasion Case

Defense testimony in the District Court trial of Hiram Ben Hundley will begin this morning following an unsuccessful attempt yesterday to gain a directed verdict in favor of the Washington tire dealer, accused of violating an OPA tire rationing order.

Immediately after the Government rested its case, Henry I. Quinn, Hundley's attorney, moved for acquittal on the ground there was not sufficient evidence to continue.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough overruled the motion which requested dismissal of all 12 counts in the indictment.

The defense was expected to open its case with testimony that sale of the tires by Hundley to three Washington firms—allegedly new tires represented as used—had been approved by an authorized District inspector.

Local companies that made purchases from Hundley are the Star Publishing Co., the Premier Purchasing Co., and the Diamond Service Co.

William M. Holt of the Bureau of Standards testified yesterday that he and an assistant, F. L. Roth, had inspected 395 of the tires and concluded that only nine had been used.

Others testifying for the prosecution were L. W. Fox, representative of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.; Harold B. Barnett of the accounting division of OPA, and John Pochna, attorney for the United States Rubber Co.

Hundley maintains business headquarters at 3448 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

21 Soldiers Killed as Plane Crashes Into W. Va. Hillside

names: Erwin Stratman, Floyd Hyet, Guy S. Hill, Corpl. Jackson, Russell A. Carter and Elmore Edwards.

At Battle Creek, Mich., both Hyet and Hill were reported safe at Kellogg Field airport where both are stationed. The men notified newspapers after reading published references that their personal effects had been found on the wrecked plane.

The United Press reported that the Fanning Funeral Home identified seven of the victims as: Thomas Kermit Masters, Greenview, Me.; Edward Carr, Philadelphia; Elmer J. Campbell, Luray, Va.; Chester Petro Uski, Auburn, N. Y.; Lieut. E. A. Harness, La Porte, Ind.; Archie W. Chamlin, Leavenworth, Kans., and Leon A. Olin, address unknown. Names of the others identified awaited Army verification.

Witnesses said the plane appeared to be "in trouble" as it passed over Coalwood at a liftle more than 500 feet.

Wreckage was hurled for 200 yards before the liner plowed to a stop in the hillside garden.

A motor and part of the tail assembly were found on top of the hill.

State troops sent out posses over the wooded mountains after miners at Coalwood said they thought they saw men leave the ship before it crashed. The plane was so low parachutes could not have opened, the miners said.

The big plane headed South, first was seen over Coalwood, about five miles from Premier, around noon. Observers saw it was in trouble and said smoke was coming from the fuselage.

Mrs. Lawrence Runyon, wife of the superintendent of mines at Premier, and her 14-year-old niece saw the ship crash.

She called to her husband upstairs, shouting that "a wing fell off a big airplane and it crashed just over the hill."

Runyon hurried over the mountain to telephone the first report of the catastrophe.

"The ship just smacked into the ground after losing that wing," Runyon reported. "There were pieces of aluminum and pieces of Army equipment all around. The flames burned high in the air."

The War Department in Washington at a late hour yesterday had no information on the Welch, W. Va., crash, save what it obtained from the press association dispatches.

It was said that Army investigators would be hurried to the scene. The nearest Army air field is about 100 miles from the scene. Meantime there was no information available here as to the point from which the ill-fated plane took off.

Son of Slave Fails to Regain Cherokee Lands

In a case dating back to Civil War days, the United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld a lower court's denial of title to 50 acres of land in Porum, Okla., to Jodie Ross, son of a Negro slave adopted by a tribe of Cherokee Indians under a treaty of 1866.

Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, was named respondent in the suit.

On May 3, 1904, Ross picked out a plot of 70 acres of land in Muskogee County, Okla., to be consigned to him under the terms of a treaty between the United States and the Cherokee Indians. The pact provided adoption into the tribe of slaves owned by the Cherokees and allotment of land to them on an equal basis with the Indians. Ross retained 20 acres designated as homestead land and sold the surplus of 50 acres to W. B. Eaton, who later resold it.

Ross claimed in a suit against the Department of Interior in 1931 that he had not executed the deed to Eaton, but District Court dismissed the case on the ground that Ross had shown no cause for relief.

Yesterday's decision, affirming the lower court's ruling, was handed down by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner and Justices Justin Miller and Henry W. Edgerton.

Gun Victim Identified As Trigger Man

Wilmington, Del., July 1 (AP).—A half-clothed, bullet-riddled body found in a forest near here was identified today as that of Anthony Romeo, whom New York police have described as the trigger man for Brooklyn's kill-for-cash syndicate.

Mrs. Romeo said her 40-year-old husband had been missing since early in June. Police said he had been dead about two weeks.

[In Washington, meanwhile, the Associated Press reported indications that President Roosevelt will appoint a seven-member military commission to try the eight Nazis next week, with the death penalty being asked.—Editor's Note.]

Although the FBI made only a terse announcement of the latest arrests, it was learned that some of the men seized are suspected of having been "graduates" of the same sabotage school in Berlin that was the alma mater of the eight agents landed from U-boats.

Revered Bund Member

One of the aliens taken into custody near the Brooklyn Navy Yard was described as a member of the Nazi Party Corps. He was said to be a member also of the German-American Bund, a veteran of ten years' service in the German army and a "Rabid Nazi" who was interned in a French prison camp for five years after World War I.

Nazi Army Vounteers

Three others were said to have volunteered for the German army under duress through the German Consul, before Pear Harbor.

One of the short wave sets seized was found in the Brooklyn Navy Yard room, where it was believed it may have been used to send tipoffs to Axis submarines preying on United Nations shipping along the Atlantic seaboard.

Scores of homes were raided by the FBI during the roundup, which FBI officials indicated is the beginning of a sweeping crackdown on members of the German American Bund whose pro-Nazi activities were launched long before America entered the war.

P. E. Foxworth, assistant director of the FBI, announced the arrests, commenting on the possible connection between the bund raids and the saboteurs already seized, said:

"The FBI is definitely more interested in the German-American Bund this week than it was last week."

In both the Brooklyn and Yorkville arrests, the FBI also seized a quantity of Nazi propaganda material and suspicious supplies and equipment the exact nature of which was not disclosed except for the short-wave sets. In New Jersey shotguns, photographic equipment and 1000 rounds of ammunition were picked up.

Names of those arrested were not made public.

Death to Be Sought For 8 Saboteurs

By James J. Kilbig
Associated Press Staff Writer

The eight men accused of landing on the East Coast from German submarines for the purpose of committing sabotage probably will be tried by a military commission next week, it was learned yesterday, and the death penalty will be sought.

Government officials have been reluctant to discuss the case because of numerous legal technicalities and its importance. However some information has come from the joint meetings of War and Justice Department officials which began Monday and ran through today. This much was indicated:

President Roosevelt will appoint a seven-member military commission, very much like a court-martial but used to try civilians rather than military prisoners.

Attorney General Biddle will personally present the Government's case at a closed trial to be held in Washington.

The defendants will be represented by a lawyer of extensive experience and well known in the Capital.

A military commission trial has few precedents. The outstanding one is the trial of seven men and one woman as conspirators in the assassination of President Lincoln.

On that occasion, President Andrew Johnson set up a nine-member commission of officers by executive order, May 1, 1865, and began the trial for May 8.

There is no provision for appeal from the decision of a court-martial or a military commission. However the Secretary of War automatically reviews decisions.

The exact site of the trial has not been disclosed, but it presumably will be a military site in Washington. Possibilities are Fort Myer, in nearby Virginia; the Army War College, and some other buildings used by the Army, including the armory.

South Wales Areas Undergo Bombing

London, (Thursday) July 2 (AP).—German raiders bombed scattered areas of the coast of South Wales early today. The planes flew over one town for some time at intervals of only a few minutes.

Agriculture Department Still Fundless as Farm Bill Deadlock Continues . . .

OPA officials, their budget clipped to 75 million dollars by the House, had warned that their existing staff would have to be cut and the entire price-control program may be jeopardized by House reductions. Price Administrator Leon Henderson will go before the Senate Appropriations Committee this morning with a plea for more liberal treatment.

Month's Adjournment Planned

Only these two measures, and the House-pending tax bill, stand between Congress and a mid-summer recess projected by leaders. The President has asked no additional legislation. The Senate majority leader disclosed for the first time plans for a full month's adjournment of business immediatey after House passage of the tax bill, set tentatively for July 18.

For the last two years, Congress has taken only informal 3-day recesses during lags in business. Barkley said a concurrent resolution may be offered for a full 30-day recess by both houses with the understanding that the President can summon Congress back at any time if emergencies develop.

"Members are entitled to return to their homes," Barkley said. "The people have a right to see them and hear them and they should hear what the people think. This is a representative Government and it is desirable to have such consultation."

No Rush For Tickets Home

With the farm bill firmly snagged, and the tax bill not due to reach the House before the week of July 13, if then, there was no rush for tickets back home.

Yesterday's efforts at a farm bill denouncement included an agreement by House conferees on a temporary extension of Agriculture funds, limited to non-controversial appropriations, and with the understanding that all funds spent by the department would be charged against amounts finally voted. The resolution included no funds for the Commodity Credit Corporation to administer sale of surplus products below parity, the crux of the farm bill dispute.

Speaker Rayburn flatly informed conferees that he would recognize no member of the conference committee to present such "stop gap" a resolution. Informal conferences were held through the afternoon, but no progress was reported.

Loan Plan Opposed

In an indirect move to break the deadlock, Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia is expected to call up in the Senate today the Bankhead bill to guarantee farmers 100 per cent of parity loans on basic commodities. House conferees may be asked to accept Senate provisions for below-parity sales of Government-owned grain, in return for assurance of full parity loans. Secretary of Agriculture Wickard is understood to be sympathetic with the loan move, but the President remains uncommitted.

Corn State representatives, whose row with the wheat bloc in opposition to below parity release of surplus wheat precipitated the farm bill lock, served notice that they would fight the loan plan as well. The American Farm Bureau Federation, which is opposing below-parity marketing of grain, likewise was reported fighting the loan move.

Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois, a member of the House conference group, declared a 100 per cent loan policy would lead corn farmers to dispose of corn stocks to the Government at full parity, "and stop raising livestock, essential to the war effort. They would stop feeding hogs and cattle, and sell them at the market price."

Advocates of 100 per cent loan deny this. They said that farmers could still buy feed below parity from Government stocks, and feed more livestock at a profit.

Many Convoys From U. S. Reach Murmansk Safely

Moscow, July 1 (U.P.).—An overwhelming number of United States convoys have successfully eluded the Nazi blockade and reached Murmansk safely, Lieut. Comdr. Samuel B. Frankel, assistant American naval attache at that Arctic port, disclosed, today.

He told American correspondents here that the largest convoy arrived at Murmansk early in June after surviving six days of dive-bomber and submarine attacks at the cost of a very few ships.

Total American casualties since April, he disclosed, numbered only 50 men, including 25 dead or missing and 25 wounded. Other crew members of ships sent to the bottom were picked up. Eleven wounded Americans now are convalescing at a Murmansk hospital.

Authorities at Murmansk were reported to be giving excellent cooperation to the Americans, providing fighter escorts for the convoys hundreds of miles out.

Beacon Light Publisher Indicted

Los Angeles, July 1 (INS).—William Ernest Kulgren, publisher of the allegedly subversive Beacon Light at Atascadero, was indicted by a Federal grand jury today under a Federal code section which forbids "interference with the success of the United States armed forces and promoting the cause of the enemy that might result in mutiny and disloyalty."

Bond was set at $25,000 and Kulgren's arrest was ordered.

WHEN CALLING FOR TRAIN RESERVATIONS

Right now, due to exceptionally heavy wartime travel and people planning 4th of July trips, our telephone facilities are flooded with incoming calls from those seeking train information or reservations.

Although every telephone has been pressed into service and we have added substantially to our staff, we know that a number of people are experiencing delay on their calls. That is never pleasant. And we are genuinely sorry about it.

Therefore, may we make a suggestion?

If you are seeking information on reservations for a proposed trip some days away, will you please put off your call until next week? Telephone lines are usually less congested early in the week.

Or, better still, stop in and make your reservation and buy your ticket all at one time. That will save you time and eliminate any possible telephone inconvenience.

With wartime demand for accommodations so great, your cooperation will help us to serve you better. However, if everything is not just as you, or we, would like it to be we ask your patience and understanding.

Police And The War

There is a limit, of course, to the extent to which policemen and firemen can be drawn into the Army and Navy without crippling essential public services at home. When that limit has been reached there is no reasonable alternative to cutting off military leave for local employes in these categories. The District Commissioners are to be commended for taking that step before the shortage of policemen and firemen attained critical proportions.

The accepted rule governing man power in this war is that the individual shall serve where he is needed most. On that basis 102 policemen and 65 firemen have been permitted to join the Navy and Coast Guard. It was entirely reasonable for the two departments thus to make their contribution to our fighting strength. A limited number of new recruits can be trained for police and fire protective work. It is only when such transfers threaten to get out of hand that the Commissioners face the necessity of intervening.

Apparently the Coast Guard was making a raid on well-trained men of the two departments. Its need for competent guards and disciplined men is doubtless great. But the policing of Washington, headquarters of the United Nations, and its protection from the unusual fire hazards of wartime are no minor undertakings. It is absolutely necessary to maintain these services at a high degree of efficiency.

Safety In July

With man power and material so precious nowadays, the victory campaign of the National Safety Council to reduce the accident toll this July 4 should have wide support. Justifying the effort are statistics showing that not only the day but all July is a time of accidents. Ordinarily 1 out of every 150 persons is injured by accident in July; traffic and other public mishaps total twice the record of any winter month; lives lost by drowning, excessive heat, electric shock and food poisoning are most numerous, and deaths from falls are excessive. The commonsense suggestion of the Council is to stay at home on the Fourth and restrict pleasure trips. But these precautions are no panacea for hot-weather accidents. It remains for the individual to watch his step, look at what he is doing and where he is going, and not to take chances. Let us remember, as the radio these days asks us to remember, that "An accident now cripples defense," and "An accident now retards victory."

If Alexandria Falls

There was British understatement in the assurance of Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, until recently commander of Britain's Mediterranean fleet, that the loss of Alexandria would be "awkward." The admiral added that such an event would not necessarily mean the elimination of British naval power in the Mediterranean. It is true that some, perhaps a good number, of the British warships at present based on Alexandria could be berthed at Port Said, Haifa and Beirut. But none of these ports has the docking, repair and supply facilities that are available at Alexandria.

Moreover, the loss of Alexandria might quickly be followed by the loss of Malta. Malta may have been neutralized, but it is still resisting, and this resistance has been made possible by the supplies that have continued to reach Malta from Alexandria. Certainly the fall of Alexandria would prevent a repetition of the exploit of the American aircraft carrier Wasp. As has just been told, the Wasp some time ago delivered aerial reinforcements to the bomb-battered island, thus enabling it at least to continue its defensive operations.

Another possibility that might follow the fall of Alexandria would be the addition to Axis naval strength of the French warships at that port. There are nine of them in all—one battleship, three 8-inch gun cruisers, one 6-inch gun cruiser, three destroyers and one submarine. For the moment they are disarmed. But should they fall into German hands, they could speedily be put into service, with or without Vichy's consent. It is unlikely, however, that the British authorities at Alexandria would agree to make such a present of useful naval strength to Hitler. Still, even if Britain's naval power in the Mediterranean were not eliminated by the fall of Alexandria, there would not be much left of it.

Little Steel

Our wage-stabilization policy is provided with its greatest test by the findings of fact offered by the War Labor Board panel on the dollar-a-day increase which has been requested by the "Little Steel" workers. Ability to pay is proven by the panel. That does not necessarily mean that the wage demand will be granted. In a recent decision involving the Chase Brass & Copper Co. the board held that "if the wage-stabilization program is to have any meaning, wage instability should not be created solely because the individual concerns may, at a certain time, be able to pay an increase above prevailing standards." But the decision in the International Harvester Co. case could be cited in support of a favorable award to Little Steel labor. In that case it was said that real-wage levels—that is, the purchasing power of the wage—which had been previously arrived at through the channels of collective bargaining should be reasonably protected. If there is no attempt to figure out what "reasonably" means, then even the well-paid steel labor may be considered to have a case for coverage of cost-of-living increases between wage agreements.

The dilemma, of course, stems from the lack of any kind of crystallization of the wage-stabilization policy. Nowadays the crux of all wage negotiations is their relation to the war on inflation. In the April 29 exposition of the seven-point program to arrest inflation, the President made this declaration to the people on wages: "Do you work for wages? You will have to forego higher wages for your particular job for the duration of war." Taken literally, this amounted to wage freezing. But there was no such intent. Flexibility had been indicated the previous day in the message to Congress wherein the President said he believed that "stabilizing the cost of living will mean that wages in general can and should be kept at existing scales." This he amplified by authorizing the War Labor Board "to give due consideration to inequalities and the elimination of substandards of living."

The plain man would imagine from the President's statements that what he had in mind was the upward revision only of substandard wages, as is the case in Canada. Clearly the steel workers are not in this category. Of nineteen industry groups surveyed by the Department of Labor only two have a higher hourly wage scale. Accordingly, if the Little Steel case were granted, the award would give rise to more inequalities than it would correct. Thus, in spite of what the panel says to the contrary, it would open a Pandora's box of wage demands. Example would not be the only reason. Many groups of workers could make out a better case to correct a rise in living costs than the steel workers. As for ability to pay higher wages, that likewise could be proved for the generality of the war industries. Indeed, the complaint hitherto has been that a wage stabilization policy was being undermined by voluntary pay increases made by the industries themselves out of profits which otherwise would go to the Treasury in taxes. Industry was seeking to insure better labor relations, in other words, at the expense of the taxpayer. This is exactly what would be done if the Little Steel plea were granted.

If we are serious about our war on inflation, the test offered by the Little Steel case must be met by going back to the original reason for wage stabilization. That was to close what Mr. Henderson calls the "inflationary gap," or the gap between the growing billions of dollars released by war work for consumer spending and the diminishing supply of consumer goods on which the money can be spent. It is this gap that threatens an inflationary rise in consumer prices. Price ceilings, it is true, are in effect. But not all the efforts of Mr. Henderson's mushrooming organization—which is further handicapped by Congressional paring down of its funds—would suffice to prevent prices from being pushed through the ceilings by a general upsurge of wage increases. Stabilization becomes an impostor term if we keep on widening the gap in the manner opened up by the Little Steel panel.

Meaney Case

Before the Senate confirmed the appointment of Thomas F. Meaney of New Jersey to a Federal judgeship, Senator Norris delivered an extraordinarily eloquent attack upon the candidate. The veteran Senator has lost none of his extraordinary capacity for feeling and expressing moral indignation during his long years of public service. However, Mr. Norris did not permit his feelings to run away with his judgment by scattering his fire. He conceded in answer to a query of Senator Ellender of Louisiana that the only point he wished to stress was that the Meaney nomination had the backing of Boss Hague of Jersey City. Mr. Norris rightly concluded that any man identified as a candidate of the Hague machine would stand condemned in the eyes of the American public.

As he pointed out, the nomination raised a national issue, not a local one, for the confirmation of Mr. Meaney will be regarded as extending the influence of the Hague machine to the Federal bench. That assumes, to be sure, that Mr. Meaney shares the political philosophy of Representative Mary Norton of New Jersey. Mrs. Norton berated Governor Edison for speaking out against the Hague machine because its votes had helped to elect him. Mayor Hague no doubt believes that Mr. Meaney will recognize his obligation to his backers after taking on his new judicial duties. And the mere suspicion that this faith might be justified should have been sufficient to disqualify the appointee.

Fiscal Year

Some idea of the way our astronomical finance is turning out the raw material of inflation is gained from a look at the Treasury books as they were closed for the fiscal year which ended on Tuesday. We spent approximately 32 billion dollars. Less than 13 billion dollars of that total was covered by taxes and other receipts, leaving a deficit of over 19 billion dollars to be covered by borrowing.

A good deal of emphasis is laid upon the fact that expenditures for nonwar purposes amounted to between six and seven billion dollars only, or, roughly, half the revenue returns of the Government. It serves no purpose, however, to stress our ability to balance a so-called ordinary budget that makes no provision for war expenses. There might be some point to doing so if the end of the war were in sight and we contemplated return to a state of unpreparedness in which war outlays would be severely limited. Instead we have entered another fiscal year with a vastly expanded spending program. That program calls for estimated outlays of 73 billion dollars (exclusive of advances to Government lending agencies). And when the war is over, we shall unquestionably continue to make large outlays for defense as well as for peacetime reconstruction projects. So we should not encourage the growth of an unwarranted optimism about the fiscal outlook by stressing the comparatively minor volume of nonwar outlays.

The primary concern of the Treasury now and for the indefinite future should be to keep the Federal deficit as low as possible, consistent with vigorous prosecution of the war. For inflation is produced by uncovered Government expenditures, regardless of the uses to which those outlays are put. At present the outlook is extremely gloomy for effective control over the forces that make for inflation. The tax bill tentatively completed by the Ways and Means Committee will provide only $5,900,000,000 of additional revenues. Even if total revenues should reach 24 billion dollars this year, the deficit would amount to 49 billions.

Secretary Morgenthau's campaign to sell war bonds will be considered a great success if it nets 12 billion dollars. What, then, of the 37 billion dollars remaining to be borrowed? A few billions of Government obligations will be taken by savings banks, insurance companies and large individual investors. But most of the borrowing will take the form of credits to Government account on the books of commercial banks. In other words, these banks will be the chief buyers of Government securities—on credit.

Facts such as these have to be harped upon until the public is aroused to the inflationary menace of our war-financing program. We are seeking to overcome the menace by means of price ceilings, rationing and vague promises of wage stabilization. Let's remember that every dollar of Government deposits created by dumping Government promises to pay on commercial banks is a dollar that the Government is going to spend. It is a dollar that will eventually be redeposited to private account and be spent again on goods or services. These dollars, added to the country's deposit currency, can and undoubtedly will be used to bid up prices of scarce goods. They can only be prevented from doing so by being siphoned off for Government use by still higher taxes or through greatly increased purchases of Government securities for private nonbanking account. To repeat: we have no tax and savings program in preparation or in prospect that remotely approaches the magnitude required to guarantee immunity from disastrous inflation. And we have very little time left in which to do anything about it.

THE WEAVERS

The weavers in the dark shall yet survive,
The silent, spider-fingered, hidden ones;
In conquest's wreckage they shall hide, alive,
The fallen nations' lean, untiring sons.
They shall be there, to draw the bloody thread
Out of the blackened garments of despair;
Let iron swords strike off each rising head,
Let nets be dragged, but they shall yet be there.

They shall be there with snares made out of stuff
That trips the bloody feet of tyranny;
Crouched in the darkness, they shall make enough
Rope to entangle him entirely;
So that each black defeat but binds him more,
Whether at Warsaw, or Corregidor.

Letters To The Editor

Selecting Lady Officers

In reply to a letter signed "Three Army Nurses," may I ask if they are members of the Junior League or related to high Army officials? How can they expect the pay of officers in the WAAC when those positions seem to have been created for the chosen few?

Is secrecy over the names of the members of the selection board to stop "pressure," or to cover up the real method of selection?

Can't a list of names, ages and addresses of officer candidates in each corps area be published in the newspapers, so a comparison can be made with the social register?

I'm all for the Army nurses, and believe me, they do deserve more credit than they ever get, except from those they serve. In the end their reward will be more than a WAAC uniform and officer's pay.

Federal Salary Increase

What has happened to the move for pay increases for Government employes? Considering the speed with which Congress is moving in doing anything about the proposed bill, it seems that nothing will be done until the war is over—if then.

I feel that the majority of Government clerks are anxious to buy war bonds but are prevented from doing so because salaries are now inadequate to meet the increased cost of living. I am sure that there would be no objections raised if these pay increases were given in the form of war bonds.

Racing Benefit

A salute to The Washington Post for being the only Washington paper which is giving the "victory" racing meet at Charles Town the support it so richly deserves. This is certainly the finest piece of work for the benefit of our fighting forces which any sport around Washington has done; and except for your excellent coverage of it, the public generally would scarcely know that they may enjoy racing at Charles Town and at the same time contribute to support a most worthy cause.

Hero Worship

Why do we have to have all our best flyers in Washington. This thing of decorating them all here, when they should stay out there and keep after the enemy where they did such gallant and valiant things, is right now attracting the attention of the Nation.

There is just no sense in bringing the raiders of Tokyo to Washington—all of them. Better raid Tokyo again, instead of bringing them half round the world.

De Gaulle's Foresight

At this time, when the eyes of the world are fastened on Africa, I should like to call the attention of Americans to the foresight of Charles de Gaulle. His words, uttered to Philippe Barres and quoted by him in his excellent book on De Gaulle deserve the consideration of those who are to determine American and English strategy.

Early in 1941, De Gaulle said: "When Hitler sends German or Italian troops into Libya their objective is the Suez Canal. But what assurance have you that other Axis troops will not enter Tunisia, Algeria or Morocco?"

They can reach those countries from Libya, they can reach them from Spain or Portugal. In any event, the Germans and Italians could, step by step, reach the region of Dakar . . . from Dakar Hitler could, by airplanes or submarines, cut the communications of the United States—and those of England, of course— with South America, the Cape and the whole of the Orient. In short, if Hitler gets a foothold on the west coast of Africa the United States will lose naval control of South America. If the United States lose control of South America it would be in great danger of losing mastery of the Panama Canal. Hitler's system of offensive eventually joined to that of Japan would gain an almost decisive advantage. Consequently the United States is bound to join the English for the defense of either French Africa or English Africa.

"The attack of the Germans in Libya in the direction of the Suez, the attempts to penetrate the region around Dakar and even a war against Russia coincide with plans for a Japanese thrust toward the South Pacific, French Indo-China and Singapore."

It is to be noted that De Gaulle was anticipating the Russian war and Japanese attacks while America slept. Let America and England realize that the brilliant war record of Charles de Gaulle places him as a great military strategist and let him be given a decisive part in war councils. Great military leaders are rare—when the Allied nations have such a military leader, let them recognize him and rely upon him in this hour of grave danger.

Small Business Dilemma

We will appreciate it very much if the Government or anyone interested will solve this for us: We have a small roadside business that it has taken us 15 years to build up, built out of 6 acres of scrub woods not far from the District of Columbia, and have put what we have made in the place to build and improve. At the present time we have a nice place. But how are we going to stay in business when we are being rationed in all we sell. Our license remains the same, taxes being raised, incomes decreased and prices of food increased. We are wondering where we are going to come out. Would be glad to sell but, of course, in this time of war and unrest that is out of the question, so what is the answer?

Subtle Hint

Why not impose a large number on the entire back of every auto inspection sticker? The number to be the number of deaths caused by traffic during the preceding year. No explanation to appear with the number. It seems to me this would be a forceful reminder that would not be too grim, yet would be psychologically powerful.

Timber Without Ruining Forests

To win this war we must have wood. We must have huge quantities of wood—huge even for the prodigal United States.

But that is no reason for killing the goose that laid the golden egg. There is no sense in destroying the power of our timber lands to grow more wood.

The timber we need to win the war, and all we need to win it, can be and should be taken from our forests without ruining them. There is no sense in crippling their production of wood for generations to come.

Wood is a crop. When a farmer harvests his crop, he leaves the land in condition to grow more crops. We can do the same with our forests. That is what forestry is for.

Instead of cutting our forests under forestry so that they can grow more wood, we are cutting almost all of them in a way to prevent them from growing more wood. We are cutting as if we were going to need no wood after the war is over. That is pure foolishness.

We shall need more wood, vast quantities of it, after the war is won. Without it this country could not prosper, as everybody knows. There is no reason why we should bury our heads in the sand and forget this vital fact, especially when higher prices and the pressure for timber are leading to vast forest destruction.

One-quarter of our timber lands are in State and National Forests. They are safe. Three-quarters are in private hands. Every acre of these can be destroyed whenever the owner chooses.

In that there is neither justice nor common sense. When forests are destroyed, everybody is hurt. The users of wood in every form are hurt. So are the users of water. So are the users of land. So are communities which depend on forest industries and that means, in some degree, every community in the Nation. There is no one in America who is not hurt when forests are needlessly destroyed.

No forests in all the world are safe against destruction unless they are under Government control. No one disputes that. In the most democratic nation in the world, Switzerland, in Sweden, no private owner can cut his timber except under government control. Nor could he in prewar Norway and France. If these nations can protect the present and the future of their people in this way, so can we.

Our Federal Government can stop this needless forest destruction, but it is not doing so. Our Federal Government can require private owners to cut their timber lands so as to keep them growing wood, but our Federal Government lets the destruction go on.

Our Federal Government has the knowledge of what needs to be done, and the foresters to see that it is well done. There is every reason why we should protect the future of our wood supply in this emergency, and none why we should neglect it.

I ask every one of you who reads this letter to get in touch at once with your Senators and Congressmen in Washington and urge immediate passage of a bill which, without interfering in any way with winning the war, will safeguard our forests and our future wood supply.

I am a forester. I give you my word that what I suggest is possible and practical. As a former State governor I know that the States cannot take action in time. Only the Federal Government can.

The forests can be saved without interfering with our war effort. To protect the future of our forests will not hinder us, but help us, both in the war and after.

Sowbugs Are Cute

Don't bust out now and say either (a) that you don't believe it or (b) that you knew it. It is true because John, almost 3 years old and having specialized for some time in sowbugs, knows his stuff. And you didn't know it before, for John made the official announcement only this week. It is important; along with each of the newly announced sulfa products. It is almost as important as if a new vitamin had swum into the ken of the nutrition nuts.

I knew something would come of it. All those hand-holding trips to the back garden stepping-stones to turn them over to see what "gave" in the insect line just could not be in vain.

"GranDADDY! Let's go find worms!"

Every stepping-stone had to be turned over to see what lay or ran or squirmed beneath. If the inspection had been foolishly postponed till after the day's heat had arrived, the angle-worm crop was a washout. They had submerged. Only the busy and eggy ants ran goofily to and fro. And when the ants appeared, the verdict by my chief scientist was:

"Ants-in-pants. No worms."

Now and then a highly polished and leggy wire worm undulated out of sight. Wire worms get no play at all from our safari, because the fish just will not give them a tumble.

But if the morning were young and the stones cool, the clammy dirt under them would writhe with from one to four nice, juicy fishworms each. Our cries of delight (we are the same age in these big-time hunting treks) can be heard for blocks. Teddy Roosevelt or the bearded Tinkham never took greater pleasure in sighting a galloping rhinoceros or a giraffe at his siesta, than is ours on the discovery of an actual fishworm of any size whatsoever. The bigger they are, however, the greater our demonstration.

In these organized hunts of ours, we have of late enlarged our scientific scope. We are growing up. At first fishworms and an occasional curled-up grubworm (those ARE events) ensconsced in his little crypt, were the only game we recognized. Anything less was a water haul. We would take each worm and feed it to the waiting fish in the pool, watch the red monsters come and gobble them up, and go back to our job of deworming the emplacements of our stepping stones. In the course of our work we naturally ran across a good many of those little bluish-gray, round-shouldered things known as sowbugs. These were the toadfish, the eels of our expeditions. Fooey on 'em and forget 'em. Let them skedaddle hither and yon to their little bluish-gray hearts content. Dead-sea fruit.

But of late, when the fishworm crop would prove a dud, I noticed John gingerly picking up these little fellows and examining them minutely. He would place them on top of a stone and watch them run, occasionally herding them back to scratch, to listen again for the starter's pistol.

Came a day when the angleworm pursuit became almost a secondary matter. A whole battalion of sowbugs would be assembled on a stone and put through their paces. The laughter on the part of their entrepreneur would be almost continuous. I must say I did not join, like a true pal, in these entertainments. My enthusiasm drew the line at sowbugs. I had always been practically allergic to them.

But one day, in the midst of one of these roundups—these insectivorous rodeos—John called out: "GranDADDY, Aren't they CUTE!"

Could I let a pal down? Should he be allowed to go all out for something in which his sidekick was uninterested? To which his sworn buddy was cold? I went and looked at the remuda he had corralled. They were apparently unalarmed at his attentions and manipulations. For the first time in my life I concentrated on the sowbug. I assayed him for his possible content in "cuteth." Reluctantly at first, wholehartedly at last because of my chum's salesmanship, I had to acknowledge that sowbugs are cute. But defined. "Cute as a bug's ear" is a well known expression. And while, since the bug himself is undersized and we had no microscope, the ears were obscure, I will grant the strong possibility that the ear of the sowbug may be the one giving rise to that expression.

It has almost—this sowbug fanaticism or flair of my young friend's—put an end to our slug hunts—a former sideline. For there are two wide boards in the garden—you know where; right between the delphinium bed and the rose plot—under which it was once nothing unusual to locate enormous gray-black-mottled super-slimy slugs. Slugs, de luxe, the official name was "ole nassy shings." But unfortunately the English language pure and undefiled has overtaken my little playmate, and they are now "slugs," as plain as a pikestaff.

The discovery of one of these grisly monsters was always the signal for the beginning of a rite—searching for the weeding hoe that had been rechristened the killer-diller, and the immediate and merciless dispatching of these loathsome things, a slug schrecklickeit. Once, on a stick, we dropped one into the pool, and never before did I see fish turn up their noses to such an extent. They marched in an orderly and indignant platoon to the other end of the pool and stood with their muzzles to the concrete wall until the insult had been removed.

And you can't fool a frog! He knows where the free lunch counter is. One came and spent his time lying on the lilypads, on his sallow tummy, looking dumb. When it comes to looking dumb, a frog is a veritable than-whicher. When it comes to being dumb, he is ever more letter perfect in his act. Once we threw a worm on a lily pad near him and he simply let go all holds and made a clumsy but skillful leap for that worm. John got a grand belly laugh and said: "His canoodle stuck up in the air!" He got the worm partly in his mouth and, showing a complete ignorance of (or contempt for) Emily Post, he took one hand at a time and poked the recalcitrant and reluctant remainder of the varmint into his mouth.

But this did not start out to be the history of a pool—a pool is all the world. It started out with a fundamental postulate, with which I shall end. STRICKLAND GILLILAN.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Post-Mortem Of Professor R

IN THE PRECEDING installment of this serial story we left Mr. R, a professor in an American university, dreaming academically about the perpetration of a whole series of atrocious crimes in order to carry out his mission to improve the world. Intent, as he put it in his public confession, upon "designing a new world map to meet democratic specifications," Professor R had worked out a plan for the political murder of Switzerland, Belgium, Portugal and Hungary, the dismemberment of Poland, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia. The purpose of these crimes was to provide the necessary meat to fatten to their proper bigness a Pan-Germany, a super-Italy, and a super-Spain.

LIPPMANN

Professor R reached these conclusions, he told us, after prolonged study of "political geography," in fact he had begun "studying geopolitik seriously as long ago as the Germans did." Thus Professor R was no victim of a sudden brainstorm; he was not seized by a sudden passionate and uncontrollable desire to murder the Swiss Republic. He had meditated upon the atrocity for a long time.

There is no evidence, as some have feared, that Professor R had been specially inoculated by barbarous aliens. He was, to be sure, infected by barbarous ideas. But there is every reason to think that he would easily have resisted and thrown off the infection if his mind had not been weakened by extreme and prolonged intellectual dissipation.

PROFESSOR R'S vice was the habit of regarding other men as inanimate objects. For him the Swiss were not human persons formed into a nation by a tradition which binds them together from their ancient past through the living present into the future. For Professor R Switzerland was merely a small patch of color on a map, and some statistics which show that there are Swiss who speak German, others who speak French, others who speak Italian. He did not think of Switzerland in its full-blooded reality and its historic permanence. Professor R thought of the Swiss as so many paper dolls, without bodies or souls, which he could cut up and paste together, as he, a little Caesar become a god, found convenient so as to fit them into his scheme.

THIS ALMOST certainly explains why he was sublimely unconscious that he was playing with murder and robbery and the blackest brand of bad faith. Switzerland, Belgium, Portugal and all the others that he wanted the United States to destroy were, as his mind worked, not those nations themselves but paper dolls made to represent them. The destruction of a paper doll is not murder. Since the world of Professor R was composed entirely of paper dolls, he cut them up and pasted them together with no sense of reality, and therefore with no feeling of responsibility, and therefore with no consciousness of guilt.

He was not murdering Switzerland; he was merely sitting in his study redrawing the map of Switzerland. He was not telling the American people to commit a foul crime and to make themselves forever infamous. He was not proposing that American soldiers invade Switzerland and shoot down the protesting Swiss. He was only a professor in his study painting new colors on a paper map.

PROFESSOR R had dabbled in the abstractions of a half-baked science. In all scientific inquiry it is necessary to use abstractions, paper dolls, manikins, maps, statistics, graphs, categories, and even fictions. These things are part of the apparatus of thinking. But in the case of Professor R the inability to understand the nature, and therefore the limitations, of scientific thinking was combined with the messianic delusion that he had discovered the special truth which would redeem the world.

This led him to feel that as a political geographer he could dispose of people and nations as if they were inanimate objects, without reality and without rights which under the supreme law of human conduct we must treat as valid with our own. In Professor R's science men do not feel called upon to do unto others as they would have them do unto them.

"SCIENCE" of this sort can prepare men's minds, as we have seen in the case of Professor R, to accept and to sanction and, in the malignant or fuehrer forms of the disease, to commit abominable crimes. Since Mr. R. was not only a professor but a teacher of teachers who then go to all parts of the country, we must pursue the inquiry further in another installment in order to find out, if we can, how it is possible for our educational system to produce such a case.

Janus-Headed War

By Sydney Greenbie

Two Equally Dangerous Enemies

THE REPORT of the Gallup Poll Sunday last, posing the question before the American people as to which is our more dangerous enemy — Germany or Japan — raises rather than settles some very serious questions. Americans were asked "Which do you think is our No. 1 enemy in the war—Japan or Germany?" The majority believed Germany to be the greater menace, and while the proportion has wavered by a matter of 2 per cent, it remains the faith of Americans that Germany is our greatest enemy.

Now the stress on proportion, the emphasis on percentage, is more dangerous than the complacency the poll reports. The recourse to statistics to measure public opinion, and let it go at that, is certain to mislead the whole American people. We have recently had an example of such misleading judgments in the figures that were juggled in all directions to prove our ship losses through submarine activity as not losses at all, or merely percentage losses. Let us not fall into the equally dangerous belief that American opinion is sound as to the war merely because 50 per cent say Germany is the menace and 25 per cent say Japan is, and 15 per cent don't know, and so on. Let us examine this poll a little more closely and see what is our real danger. Some call it complacency. I call it confusion.

That there should be any division of opinion left in America today is one of the most serious reflections on what has passed for Government information services yet made. It certainly justifies the establishment of a unified information agency with so trustworthy a head as Elmer Davis. Without going back up the stream in an effort to reconsider the water that has already passed under the bridge, it is nevertheless still important that we look carefully into the reasons for this general public confusion. America cannot afford to go on indefinitely looking one moment to Japan and another to Germany as the greater enemy without playing directly into the hands of both Germany and Japan, and losing the war in consequence.

FIRST, THEN, this is the significant point in the question raised by the poll. Both Germany and Japan have obviously played their propaganda games very effectively. Not merely within the period of the last two or three years of war, but for decades before that. It was originally the Kaiser's cry of the "Yellow Peril." Japan never did seriously object to that cry. The more that Europe thought Japan capable of being a "peril," the better the Japanese liked it. Indeed, they did much to play up their own dangerousness even before they had a navy big enough to measure up to any ratio.

But when Japan began to be a real power, Japan did the reverse. She began to play up her weaknesses in order to gain time to make herself strong. In order to do this effectively, Japan for over two decades carried on an intensive propaganda in America to show Americans that they were—and, in fact have always been—a very peace-loving people. So well did they play this game that no amount of facts brought out from the pages of Japan's past to show her militaristic nature could convince Americans that Japan was not peaceful in all her intentions and inclinations. Our pro-Japanese liberals sang that song in harmony with Japanese jingoists, and the discords were put down by the innocent American public as merely Oriental sing-sing music found in Gilbert and Sullivan opera.

FOR MORE than 20 years the menace of Japan was played down, and it has taken. It has so inoculated the American mind that, for reasons not yet brought into the open, American opinion is keyed down to an almost hush-hush tone. For some mysterious reason it is almost impossible ot get downright information about Japan into the American periodicals. As an example, take the case of the recent trials in Washington of the Americans who violated the Foreign Agents Act and have been sent to jail. These Americans were paid Japanese propaganda agents. They spent some $200,000 of Japanese money giving opiates to American opinion and putting it to sleep. Yet, apart from some slender reports in the American press, reports that would never make any American sit up and reach for his gun against the Japs, there has been little published about the trial.

On the other hand, a trial of perhaps a little more dramatic interest took place in which some German spies were sent to jail. The story was fully covered in one of the important monthly magazines and played up for all it was worth.

Now, one might well ask, why is there this tendency in our information agencies to put the quietus on the revelation of Japan's true nature? Why is there still the tendency not to speak harshly against Japan? Perhaps Elmer Davis will find this out and correct it. But certain it is that the answers in the Gallup Poll reflect this very attitude.

These answers, we are told in the Gallup Poll, were based on definite opinions. Those who thought Germany the greater menace felt that Germany started it all; that Japan took her cue from Berlin; that Germany was more powerful; that Hitler wanted to dominate the world, and so on. On the other side, the opinion was that Japan attacked us first; that in the Pacific we were directly involved because of the nearness of our possessions; that Germany was too busy with Russia and Britain; that Japan had a greater hatred of us because of our Exclusion Act, and that Japanese were more treacherous and cruel, and so on.

WHAT THIS questionnaire reveals is a very dangerous division of opinion in America—just exactly what both the Germans and the Japanese want. Why does this condition obtain? Have we not spent thousands of dollars in information service? The reason is quite simple. Americans know something about Germany and Europe, but are and have been for many decades uninformed in regard to Japan and China. At present, the handling of information about Europe by such men as Shirer is excellent. There is not an American in the press or on the radio today who knows the Far East as well, except perhaps Upton Close. And most of the Far Eastern information still passes through the hands of people who have perhaps not been west of Hoboken. It still remains impossible to effectively measure American opinion as to the war on Japan. For example, the gag that Japan took her cue from Berlin is still the dominant gag of alleged experts on the Far East. Until Americans know and understand, fully and completely, the nature and character of our Japanese enemy we shall have people believing a lot of balderdash about the Far East.

Now, in itself that is of no serious moment. But as a factor in breaking up American opinion, of dividing American will, it is of the most dangerous moment. The sneaking feeling among some Americans of influence that perhaps, after all, Japan is the most orderly, most efficient and most progressive force in the Far East and might, after all, put China's house in order, and that we might do business with Hirohito—that, I fairly believe, is the reason for this quietus on Japan. And that is what makes Americans, who hate the Japanese for their treacherous attack on us, feel a bit fainthearted or kindly disposed to Japan. This must be corrected if we are to prosecute the war to the clean and unequivocal Victory, with a capital V, we all want.

IF THE American people only realized the full and terrible danger of letting Japan get away with any of her gains, they would not nibble off from their determination a small fraction to be added to the war against Germany. What is the full and terrible consequence of a Japanese victory? Industrially and economically, it is of lesser danger. But if Chinese should begin to feel as India and Burma and others have somewhat begun to feel, that they could better share the lot of Japan, and Japan succeeds in arming the man power of China alone (a danger I do not foresee), then would Japan make the terror of Nazi German domination of Europe trifling in comparison.

There is no space here to make further comparisons. But the main point to bear in mind is that Germany can't win without Japan. If Japan were blown out of the conflict, Germany would go under. The British and American navies are supreme in the Atlantic, even with their forces divided; with Japan out of the picture, Germany could not go on. It is reasonable enough, of course, to assume the reverse. Once Germany is out, Japan is a mopping-up proposition. And that is exactly what I wish to convey. Anything short of such a conviction is dangerous to America and the United Nations.

From their point of view, both Germany and Japan prefer to have us think the one or the other is the real criminal. Japan hopes that we will concentrate on Germany and slacken on her till she can consolidate her gains and then turn on us in full force. Germany hopes that we will be so preoccupied in the Pacific that we will slacken our effort in the Atlantic. Wouldn't it be just wonderful if we did? Wouldn't they both like it?

So far as we are concerned, we can blissfully hope for the day when Germany will show her real fear of Japan, and Japan will have no further hesitation in showing that she despises Germany no less than the rest of the European world. It is our business to keep before us, at all times, that we are at war with two equally dangerous and pressing enemies. We are a Janus-headed Nation. We have two gateways to the world. Closing either one would be little short of a catastrophe. We need not fear that this will happen. But we must keep our eyes open in both directions.

And for heaven's sake, let us stop the silly use of the words "war effort." This is no longer a war effort. It is a war, and a war it will have to be until it is wholly won.

Erwin Rommel Of Africa

By Robert Kapp

His Military Fame Will Outlast The War

AS THE German North African armies pound ever deeper into Egypt on their way, so they hope, to the Suez Canal and beyond into Asia, attention focuses ever more sharply on the man who commands their eastern drive, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel.

The name of Erwin Rommel is now well known to American newspaper readers and radio listeners. He has figured prominently in the sweep and counter-sweep of armored divisions across the desert sands of Italian Libya and Egypt since the spring of 1941.

HE IS referred to continually and increasingly by military experts and foreign correspondents as one of the most outstanding military tacticians produced by World War II, on either the United Nations or Axis side. Even his British enemies in North Africa have not concealed their admiration for the military genius Rommel has shown. He has been recently described as of nearly Napoleonic stature as a soldier.

With his emergence as one of the best soldiers of this war, certain facts about the character of Rommel attract interest. They add up to depict a colorful personality with a flair and dash to his soldiering on the desert sands of Africa.

His personal bravery in battle has been attested time and again. He really leads his troops into battle and on one occasion, according to report, took part in the repulse of an enemy tank attack. He expects his subordinate officers to emulate his example.

Although he is the commanding officer, Field Marshal Rommel shares personally the dangers, hardships and victories of his men, and consequently, he is very popular with them.

When a battle is in progress, Rommel never rests. Foreign correspondents in North Africa report that during one day of fighting recently Rommel directed a morning tank engagement, flew over the enemies' lines in the afternoon, and in the evening perfected his plans for the next day.

Several times during the various North African campaigns, Rommel has driven up to a group of recently captured prisoners, clambered down from his tank and explained to them, at some length, why they lost.

Thus Rommel the soldier, the conquering field marshal, has made secure his reputation as a tactician and made known his name. But the background of Rommel the man is unknown to the general public. His life, until he sprang into prominence as the capable commander of the Nazi Afrika Korps over the past fifteen months, is obscure.

NEVERTHELESS, details of his life are available. They tell the story of an able German militarist who owes his latest and most successful career as a soldier to Adolf Hitler, the non-German who now rules Germany and most of continental Europe.

Erwin Rommel had completed one career as a German military man before he first met Adolf Hitler in the early 1920's. Rommel became a private in the Kaiser's Imperial Armies in 1910. He was then standard bearer in a Wurttemberg infantry regiment. World War I found him a subaltern in the same regiment. Officer Rommel served all through the war, attaining the grade of captain in 1918. He early showed great courage and ability.

He led his Wurttemberger troops to distinguished achievements in France, in Rumania, in Macedonia and in Italy. It was in Italy in 1917 that he gained for his feats during the German break through in the Isonzo River Valley the coveted, highest German decoration, "Pour le Merite."

It is reported that in World War days Rommel revealed an utter contempt for the fighting abilities of the Italians, then his enemies, a fact which assumes an ironic significance in 1942 when Rommel has been leading a campaign on Italian territory with Italian troopers under his command.

The German defeat and the end of World War I cost Captain Rommel his job. By 1920, however, he was a policeman in his native province of Wurttemberg. Wurttemberg lies next to the German province of Bavaria where, in 1920, Adolph Hitler and his National Socialist Storm Troopers were one of several political groups which made the political scene in Bavaria particularly turbulent.

The Nazis soon extended their activities into Wurttemberg. Policeman Rommel, who was a big and rough bully boy type, evinced a tendency to side with the Storm Troopers in the street brawls of the early twenties which finally brought about his dishonorable discharge from the force. He soon became a Nazi Storm Trooper himself in the capacity of physical terrorist. His ruthless ability at smashing up the party's political opposition, disrupting their gatherings, blowing up auditoriums hostile to the Nazis, was such that he won the complete admiration of Hitler. The future fuehrer made Rommel his bodyguard.

FOLLOWING Hitler's accession to the German Chancellory in 1933, the new dictator secured his bodyguard a berth in the Reischwehr as a battalion commander, roughly equivalent to a major in the United States Army.

Rommel was not a Prussian, having been born in Heidenheim, Wurttemberg Province (November 15, 1891), nor did he have the militaristic family background usually indispensable for a German army officer who seeks promotion. His father had been only a simple mathematics teacher in Wurttemberg schools. But Rommel was Adolf Hitler's good friend and he manifested a talent for tactics. Promotion came quickly. He became a colonel in 1937. Meanwhile, he attached himself to that group of officers in the expanding Reichswehr who were interested in regaining German colonies lost during the first World War. They studied at the Reich Colonial Institute at Munich while Hitler and Germany pushed forward with plans for the coming war when the Reich would redeem the humiliation suffered in the defeat of 1918 and the Versailles Treaty of 1919. Rommel studied Africa in particular. Subsequently he made a trip there, returning to Germany early in 1938. He had passed his time on this trip in Italian North African colony of Libya and in Egypt.

The tall, gaunt Rommel, obviously German, and from his stiff bearing, a military man, ascribed his presence in Cyrenaican Libya as due to a love of travel. He was, he said on several occasions, a tourist. Strangely enough, there were many other similar Nazi visitors to Italian North Africa. Rommel and his fellow countrymen were not well received there by the Italian officials and military men. In fact the Italians exceedingly disliked them.

Rommel employed his tourist time in Libya and in Egypt, as did the other Nazi visitors, in extended examination of the desert topography and climatic conditions. He likewise traveled along the Libyan coast as far east as the Egyptian border inspecting Italy's military installations. In Egypt he saw much of the Suez Canal and also such British desert outposts as Mersa Matruh, captured only this week by his onrushing Nazi hordes.

Back in Germany with his knowledge of desert warfare, Rommel spent the next few years training soldiers to battle under artificial conditions approximating those he believed would be encountered in North African desert fighting.

Before he came to Libya again, however, Rommel performed other services for Germany. From 1938-1940 he was in command of Hitler's personal staff. He participated in the marches into the Sudetenland, Czechoslovakia and Poland. During the campaign against France and the Lowlands of May and June 1940, he commanded a Nazi armored division which broke through the Maginot Line. The German transocean wireless described his role as follows: "Through great personal courage and determination in his decisions he soon reached the Atlantic Coast with his division, thus affording the high command the essential possibilities for the final smashing of the French and British armies." Hitler awarded him the knight's cross of the iron cross.

ROMMEL, now a lieutenant general, took charge of Axis Libyan forces in March, 1941, after Italian resistance had melted away before English and Australian troops under Sir Archibald Wavell. At that time the British had driven half-way across the Italian possession.

It is reported that Rommel, in the light of his plans, told his boss, Hitler, that he expected to reach Suez before the beginning of June, 1941. But, somehow he and the specially picked and trained German troopers and their Italian allies failed to reach his goal in accordance with his schedule.

Nor has Rommel attained Suez yet, despite his recent and brilliant tactical maneuvering which has forced England's soldiers well back into Egypt and raised his reputation to new heights.

In the charge and countercharge of armies across swirling desert sands, Rommel has developed and put into practice new military ideas in an attempt to restart the Nazi blitzkrieg, which has been stalled in Africa as well as on the Russian front. He spent some time in Berlin last winter, conferring with the high command to devise other schemes to overcome the successful British defense in Africa, and the similarly successful Russian defense. And this summer, Rommel in Africa, and von Bock and others in Russia are attempting new offensives against their foes which, at least in the beginning, move more slowly and ponderously than did blitzkrieg.

Hitler promoted Rommel temporarily to field marshal early this year and made the promotion permanent last week after his capture of Tobruk. Notwithstanding this latest victory the new field marshal has not always found the situation to his liking in the 15 months he has been there since March, 1941. There have been times when the British might have knocked him out and one reported occasion when they would have captured him had he not been absent from his headquarters.

Rommel, however, is a resourceful commander with an eye ready to note the main chance to recover from the setbacks he suffers.

Unionizing Kansas, A Vital Issue

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, who would answer if you called him Mr. Kansas, has written an editorial, or piece, which, I suppose, may be taken as the considered judgment of the people of Kansas on the most angrifying domestic issue of the day, an issue, I should say, of slavery or freedom for Kansas workers, which I will here quote and discuss somewhat because the old man generally speaks the morals and politics of the State and breed of Kansas and because, in the end, he concludes that the issue is too little.

Clyde Reed, the junior Senator, called on him to discuss his candidacy for the office of Governor and Mr. White, who rightly, if immodestly considers himself a political institution, told Reed he would not support him. It is a friendly, windy article, with a whiff of sweat in it, which visualizes a lovable old sage a-settin' on the stoop and whittlin' and slapping flies.

"Here is a man who, when he is well, is a dynamo of energy, also who is eager to get things done which he thinks should be done for his State and country," Mr. White wrote. "He finds himself in Washington hogtied by Democrats. He is surrounded by a cordon of inaction on one of the things he wants done and everyone who knows Clyde Reed knows that when he wants it done he wants it done pronto.

"HE WENT back from Washington to his home town, where a big defense industry is being installed, and found that no man in Parsons could get a job who did not first pay some kind of blackmail toll to the labor racketeers out of Kansas City. They came down to prey on the working people of southern Kansas by compelling them to pay a big union initiation fee and heavy dues as the price of working for their country in time of war. He saw as a great national evil the thing happening in Parsons. It is happening all over the country. Local labor is being blackmailed by labor racketeers. Reed tried nationally to get a law passed to stop the blackmail. The Democrats in the Senate, and particularly the Administration, said thumbs down; nothing doing; go play with your ball; what's it to you?

"So he comes out of Kansas full of wrath against the injustice. Then, against the advice of most of his friends and his family, Clyde Reed of Parsons plunges into this fight to dramatize, at least to Kansas and the Middle West, the gross and terrible injustice to American citizens who have to pay blackmail to work on the war industries of their country in its hour of peril. Of course, the Senator is right, dead right, and he thinks it can be done by a model State law in Kansas. Certainly he is going on the rampage. If he is elected Governor he is willing to chuck that good Washington job and take a poorer one for the sake of a wrath which is burning his heart and wrath, as you know affects Clyde Reed like a boil."

Mr. White then predicts that Reed will be beaten badly because: "the Kansas Senator has too little for an issue and he got in too late. Labor unions, however evil their abuses may be, are not an issue—not a major issue—anyway, in Kansas."

I can respect Mr. White as a prophet on Kansas politics, but to me there is as much cause for alarm in the old man's complacency, his flippant dismissal of this terrible thing, which he not only acknowledges, but describes and condemns, as "too little for an issue."

This means that the rot has infected William Allen White, too, a man who always in the past could be expected to attack anything so evil as this blackmailing racket carried on at the expense of his own friends and neighbors of Kansas and of the Government itself and to the peril of the very freedom for which the Kansas war plants are being built. It is not merely that he has decided not to support a certain candidate which disturbs me, but that this man, who often before has spoken for a people noted for their political wisdom and their passion for the rights of man, and who may speak for them in this case, thinks this issue is a political triviality.

He acknowledges that the Administration in Washington stopped attempts by the National Legislature to redress this outrage against the workers' rights and freedom, wherein he concedes the executive branch controls the legislative. And he might honestly have added that the graft which the blackmailers steal from these workers is placed at the disposal of the party in power to buy elections until the American system of Government rots away into a dictatorship. Yet he says the issue isn't much, and the worst of it probably is that the the people of Kansas, like William Allen White, have looked the monster in the eye so long that they are now willing to accept its rule and scoff away, as White does, the burning wrath of the only candidate with the honesty and courage to fight it.

Allies Bomb Jap Bases In Big Raid

Wirephotos From New Guinea Show U. S. Planes in Action

Somewhere in Australia, July 1 (AP).—Japanese bases in New Britain and New Guinea were attacked by strong forces of Allied bombers before dawn Tuesday in the largest raid in several days, it was disclosed tonight by airmen who participated in the attack.

Despite thick clouds, the Allied planes bombed Rabaul, on New Britain, where large fires were started among installations in the wharf area, they said.

One bomber was reported to have made several runs over its target despite heavy antiaircraft fire, leaving a blaze which was visible for 20 miles through the overhanging haze.

At about the same time, the pilots said, other bombers attacked Lukanai Airport, near Rabaul, dropping demolition bombs on runways and buildings.

Heavy clouds prevented observation of the results. The runways at Lae, New Guinea, were also attacked but a ground haze and a dim moon made the effects unobservable, the bomber pilots reported.

Any Bonds Today? Yes, Nothing But!

$7000 Stamp and Bond Sale At One Store in 15 Minutes

Thousands of victory dollars poured across retail store counters for 15 minutes yesterday as District merchants halted all other business to concentrate on selling war bonds and stamps.

Final figures locally on the opening day's march toward July's billion dollar national goal will be available sometime today.

One large downtown department store reported that its sales force sold about $3000 worth of bonds and slightly more than $4000 in stamps during the 15-minute period alone.

With perfect timing, strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner" stopped shoppers promptly at noon in many stores, while others had radios tuned in on coast-to-coast programs.

Not a dress, not a pair of shoes, not a single handkerchief was sold until 12:15 p. m., while crowds of women, and, surprisingly for the midday hour, many men cheerfully stood in line at bond-selling booths to plunk down their dimes and dollars.

One store, in the face of a rush that rivaled a super-bargain sale ran out of bonds and stamps near the end of the 15-minute period. Reinforcements were rushed in, however, so that no customers went away empty-handed.

At another store a small boy not a day over 4, demanded all of his mother's loose change and a few car tokens to boot, and pasted his stamps in a slightly grimy album while a small crowd watched approvingly.

At still another store, special bond-selling booths on every floor were beseiged with customers, all workng on the principle that stamps bought durin that particular period counted a little more than those purchased at any other time during the day.

Even the ten-cent stores reported a thriving business in behalf of Uncle Sam, and customers sought stamps long after 12:15 had passed.

Because the Treasury Department failed to make its June goal of 800 million dollars, official interest in the July returns was heightened considerably. If the billion-a-month pace also fails, the Treasury has agreed with advocates of compulsory purchase plans that it will "consider" the abandonment of the present voluntary sales scheme.

City sunburn will be the 1942 version. The sun plays no favorite spots, for it shines just as brilliantly on a sun deck, in a backyard or on your own loft as it does at a distant seashore or lake resort.

Asked Many Times

Just as healthy and attractive a coat of tan may be acquired by the city-bound as the beach resorter if it is done correctly.

"How can I be lazy in the sunshine and not come out of it looking like a Red Indian or a boiled lobster?" This question is often asked the beauty editor. "How can I keep my nose from peeling," is another query.

There's a right and wrong way of getting a nicely evened tan. A lot of sunshine to get the beneficial Vitamin D—that's good. But too much unprotected exposure to ultraviolet rays—such can be very bad. It is the ultraviolet rays that cause dangerous sunburning. So it is better to make a partner of the sun—you can't find a better health friend—or a more dangerous enemy. But if you will observe the following Tan Commandments you'll line the sun up on your side.

Tan Commandments

1. Don't sleep in the sun or on the beach.
2. Don't drink strong liquor while exposed to the sun.
3. Don't go bareheaded in strong sunlight.
4. Don't read books or play cards in the sun.
5. Don't sprinkle perfume or cologne on the skin before sitting in the sun.
6. Do acquire a coat of tan by taking progressive doses of sun.
7. Use suntan oil as an aid against the drying effect of sunlight.
8. Use tinted sun cream as a foundation under makeup. Such concentrated form of sunburn preventive tends to bar out a certain amount of the sun's rays while providing lubrication for the skin.
9. Use tanproof lotion if you want to avoid tanning and freckles.
10. Use a balm to even out an uneven tan.

P. S.—Don't be caught napping on cloudy days. Ultraviolet rays penetrate haze, and can give you just as bad a burn as those of sunny days.

First of all, don't begin with the idea that you must change from lily white to chocolate brown in one short week. Don't drench your body in heavy oil as if you were anointing a salad, unless you want your skin seared like a French-fried potato. Use one of the sun-tanning lotions for they have been chemically analyzed. The special tanning agents in them prevent the burning sun rays from penetrating the skin.

Start with five minutes of sun on both sides of the body, then build up gradually, adding three minutes each day. Never take more than 20 minutes on each side at any time. Take your sun bath lying on a large white sheet. This is important because when you lie on your stomach or back, the sides of the body are in shadow and don't get the sun. But the white sheet will reflect the rays and you'll tan more evenly.

Here's the Answer

Do you know what happens when you sunburn? Here's the answer. The sun's ultraviolet rays act on the pigment-forming cells, produce a brown coloring which protects the body from the irritating effects of further sunlight. The skin first turns slightly reddish, later turns brown. If, however, the skin is unusually sensitive, or it is overexposed, it becomes red and inflamed.

Each person has to figure out his own suntan quotient, for all complexions vary in the amount of sun they'll take. Some delicate blonde skins and many babies' skins never build up a complete protection to suntanning. They need a full-time sun-screen. Brunettes, too, should use a sun-screen to keep that leathery look at bay.

You will have to decide if you want to be Indian brown or golden honey, if you want to shine like a bright copper penny, or stay fair. There are creams and lotions galore. There are beach oils and suntan oils, there are beauty balms and tanproof lotions.

Bias Frocks Need Careful Cleaning

The withdrawal of slide fasteners and the curtailment of some types of button materials have set the fashion designers the problem of how to close a dress without a closing device. Latest from their bag of tricks is the tie-it-yourself closing, a fashion involving all sorts of bows, sashes and cross-over drapes. It has even been suggested that some new variations will be forthcoming from first-aid bandaging courses.

Smart as the swathed look is in war-time, the cut of the fabric is usually extremely easy to stretch. Whereas your sash may wind around you once the first time you wear it, you will find it getting longer and longer with each wearing. These dresses require definite precautions to preserve the lines. Any intricate cut is best trusted only to a reliable dry-cleaner. According to the National Association of Dyers and Cleaners, the bias is the basis of many pressing problems. Only a skilled, sure hand can finish a bias-cut fabric and maintain its original measurements.

Fortyish Man's Long-Time Attentions to Woman End Abruptly When 'Dizzy Blonde" Half His Age Crosses Their Path; Can Friendship Be Restored?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For 14 months I enjoyed a fine friendship with a man who is in his early forties. We were together much of the time; about four evenings a week, as a rule, and he always telephoned me the other nights. He is well bred and well educated and we seemed to have everything in common. We were very understanding of each other. Then he met (through me) the young sister of my closest woman friend—a girl 22 years of age, and a veritable "dizzy blonde."

He dropped me immediately and has since devoted himself to her. We never see each other any more. The girl has been keeping company with married men, as she told me herself, and he knows nothing of her character. I do want to see him again. Should I expect him to see me? What could I do to reclaim his interest in me? He is far superior to this girl. I shall be looking forward to your answer.

M. S. P.

DEAR M. S. P.: In view of this man's agressive interest in the "dizzy blonde," one cannot say that he is "far superior" to her. On the contrary, if they did not have aspects of personality and character in common, he never would have been attracted to her. It is an old and true saying that "like attracts like." Granted that you and she may be remarkably dissimilar, and that he found you to be a greatly sufficing companion until he met her—still, that doesn't prove he is more "your kind" than her kind. It merely proves that he is a typical human being—which is to say that he has many facets to his nature, and thus is spontaneously attuned to different kinds of persons for different reasons, with varying degrees of intensity.

The fact that he dropped out of your life completely after meeting the girl is pretty plain evidence that she has far more than you possess of "what it takes" to rouse and hold his attention. That being so, it is unlikely that his erstwhile considerable enthusiasm for your society will ever be renewed. It is probable that he believes he has found in her every companionable quality he appreciated in you—plus other appealing or provocative attributes besides. Thus, I think you would be cherishing a false hope, if you were to lean on the expectation of becoming his "best girl" again. And certainly his once fond friendship for you imposes no obligation upon him to pursue the routine, if and after it loses significance.

In my opinion, there is no overt action you can take, that would restore the former status. I would say, indeed, that the individual is powerless to duplicate previous experiences, try as he may. Life is growth and transition—with the result that the individual is so inexorably though subtly and perhaps imperceptibly altered from day to day that he can never recapture the essence of yesterday's relationships. However, since you "do want to see" this man again,—I advise you to adopt a genuinely friendly attitude of mind toward him, and to happily hold this mood consistently (keeping it free of melancholy and recrimination) whenever thoughts of him occur. Then, should you meet him by chance, which is wellnigh inevitable, you will make an impression so astonishingly pleasant that some form of friendship will blossom anew. But only—and please remember—if your innermost attitude toward him is habitually one of genuine, buoyant good will.

"Very Old Lady" Needs a Wheel Chair

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Have any of your readers a wheel chair they would be willing to lend a very old lady who has heart trouble and is crippled with arthritis? I do not think she will need it many months; and it would be used in an immaculate home, with the best of care guaranteed.

Although this lady lives in the country, she cannot get out of doors. She is confined to a room in the rear of the house and thus is denied even the diversion of watching highway traffic go by. She and her daughter comprise their household and although the daughter is no longer young, she could wheel her mother out on the porch during the warm months—if we can procure the chair for them.

Would you have the goodness to devote a corner of your column to this request? And if anyone has such a chair to lend, will they please telephone me at TEmple 2521, after 5:30 p. m.? Sincerely,

MRS. J. D. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Garden Choked With Weeds? Then Eat Them for Vitamins

By Ida Jean Kain

A WEED that gets around by a formidable technical name created quite a stir in Manhattan's Central Park recently when a nice looking young woman was arrested for picking it to feed her 3-year-old charge. It developed that the youngster couldn't see such conventional vegetables as spinach, but she went for the weed—cooked or raw—and after having been sickly, she was growing like a weed.

There are a number of weeds that are good to eat. This particular one is chenopodium album, and it has enough common names to sound like a list in itself. You may recognize it as lambs-quarters, pigweed, white goosefoot, fathen, frost-bite, mealweed and bacon weed. They're all the same thing.

It is an annual and you come across it in gardens, grain fields and waste ground. It grows from 6 to 10 inches tall and has erect stems which branch out toward the top. The flowers are small and greenish. It makes good eating.

Edible Weed

Purslane is a nice summer weed. You can toss the top into the cookpot. Along with turnip greens or spinach, or you might prefer to serve it raw as a salad. This is a low-growing plant with thick, juicy leaves.

Then there's the milkeed. The entire plant turns out well in the cookpot. The leaves are smooth-edged, thick and oval, and grow in pairs. The stem and underside of the leaves are distinguished by a light down.

Brake-fern has a food value about equal to that of cabbage. The English like the fronds as potherbs and the stems can be cooked like asparagus. It is found in dry spots in the woods and also along the roadside. It flourishes in midsummer. Another asparagus-like plant is young burdock. If you strip off the outer rind, authorities on edible weeds assure us, you have a delicious dish.

Broad-Leaf Greens

Among the docks are the broad-leafed and Patience, or spinach, docks. It is suggested that these be cooked in two or three waters. Any vegetable water that is drained off should always be saved for use in broths, soups or vegetable juice cocktails. For better flavor, cook the docks with a bit of ham or bacon.

Pokeweed, another member of the asparagus green family, is often sold in the market. It should be soaked for about an hour in cold water, tied into neat bundles, and then cooked in two or three waters for about three-quarters of an hour.

If you are feeling adventurous about your cooking, you might try the nettles. The sting evaporates with the steam and English writers of a day gone by used to say there was nothing like a good mess of nettles.

From Massachusetts Come Glowing Accounts Of Dutch Queen; Summer Social Register, Just Out, Presents Changing Social Picture

WHAT "THE QUEEN SAID" seems to be the keynote of all news floating down to Washington these days from Lee, Mass., where Queen Wilhelmina is spending some time at a nearby estate. But the best of many stories from those parts recently has to do with that shopping expedition made by Her Majesty a few days ago. . . .

Seems that rustlings of the local grapevine spread the report that the Queen was planning a shopping stroll, so by the time she got to the biggest store in town, several hundred other customers were also on hand. Outside, meanwhile, another crowd thronged the street and clustered around the doorway.

"My, this must be a good store—to draw all these people," observed Her Majesty as she made her way inside. . . .

'A Crown' In a Cottage . . .

Lee citizens loved that, but what has endeared the Dutch Queen to them even more than that was the letter she wrote to a town councilman in reply to his criticism of the way the station platform was roped off for Her Majesty on the day of her arrival. It so happened that at the same time, a number of soldiers were to leave by the train that brought her in. But since the platform was roped off to keep the democratic crowd from getting too close to royalty, the soldiers had to bid goodby to their loved ones before they reached the platform.

One town councilman publicly expressed his indignation at the arrangement, and the report had hardly reached Queen Wilhelmina when a reply was forthcoming. She deeply regretted that such a thing had happened, she said in effect. There was certainly no good reason why the platform should have been roped off, and certainly it was not done either by her order or wish. . . .

Incidentally, while Crown Princess Juliana and her children are occupying the big house on the John J. Bross Lloyd estate, Queen Wilhelmina is living in one of the cottages.

It's a Changing Whirl . . .

One look at the Summer Social Register for 1942, and then a hasty comparison with last year's similar tome is all that is necessary to give you an idea of the changing social picture in 13 key cities of America.

Here are a few facts:

This season's little black-book-of-the-bluebloods contains 714 less country and out-of-town addresses than usual. Society is staying in town this summer. . . . Addresses at shore resorts have dwindled considerably; more than half resort addresses included are inland. . . . Only 216 American families (as against 292 listed last year) are spending the summer in Canada. . . . Of the 78 American families still listing foreign addresses, 15 are in England, 12 in South America, 12 in Bermuda, 9 in Mexico, 4 in France and the others are scattered all over the globe.

No Yachts Listed . . .

There's a noticeable increase in the number of persons married—the total being 1681 in this edition as compared with 1336 last year. In 1940 the number was 1120. . . . Because so many large yachts have been turned over to the Government, and since many of the smaller ones are not being used, all reference to them is omitted from this year's edition of the Summer Register. . . . Washington is, of course, one of the cities covered in the book which gives the country or foreign addresses of families from 13 cities—when said families are not listed at the winter address appearing in the previous edition of the Register.

Miss Rover Is Bride of Mr. McManus

St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church was the setting yesterday for the marriage of Miss Margaret Mary Rover, daughter of former United States Attorney and Mrs. Leo A. Rover, to Edwin Peter McManus of Philadelphia, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter McManus. The Rev. James P. Grace read the nuptial mass at 9 o'clock and a breakfast followed at the Mayflower for members of the immediate families.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a pastel blue dressmaker suit with accents of cornflower blue, a calot of green leaves and blue cornflowers and carried a bouquet of orchids.

Mrs. Ignatius J. Keane, the bride's sister, was matron of honor attired in a pink dressmaker suit worn with a pink calot and blue veil and she carried pink roses and blue delphinium. Charles Gorman of Danbury, Conn., acted as best man.

The bride is a graduate of Immaculata Seminary and of Trinity College. Mr. McManus received degrees from Georgetown College and Georgetown University Law School and at present is an attorney with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The couple plan to make their home in Washington until next month when the bridegroom expects to be called into Army service. For her traveling costume Mrs. McManus wore a luggage tan suit with green accessories and an orchid corsage.

Memorial Service Set for Tomorrow At Cathedral

The many Washington friends of the late Senor Luis Mariano Zuberbuhler and Senora de Zuberbuhler, including officials of the Argentine Embassy and others from the Diplomatic Corps, plan to attend the memorial service for the couple tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock in St. Matthew's Cathedral.

Their airplane crashed in Santiago del Estero Province on the eve of their fourth wedding anniversary, and funeral services were held in Buenos Aires. He was municipal finance secretary of Buenos Aires and Senora de Zuberbuhler was the daughter of George Garrett, president of the Metropolitan Club. Her mother, Mrs. George Gordon, is the wife of the former American Minister to the Netherlands.

An old friend of the Garrett family, the Rev. W. Coleman Nevills, S. J., former president of Georgetown University, will say the mass at tomorow's memorial service. He will be assisted by the Rev. Edward L. Buckey, pastor of St. Matthew's, where the couple were married.

As One Hoosier to Another—

"Have a cake or sandwich," said a bevy of "Hoosierettes" to Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, another Hoosier at the Indiana State Society's party yesterday afternoon honoring outstanding Indianans holding important jobs in Washington. "But don't draft our beaus," added one girl to the Director of the Selective Service. In the group are (left to right) Katherine Ludlow Kayser, Joan Sayers, General Hershey, Barbara Ballard and Ellen Hershey.

Hoosiers Frolic at Alva Belmont House In Honoring Indianans Now Holding Key Positions in Nation's Capital

By Genevieve Reynolds

WHEN A HOOSIER meets a Hoosier in Washington there's plenty to talk about. For instance—there are the folk back home, or the new war job another Indianan has just acquired. Hence everyone was having a chatting good time at the Indiana party yesterday honoring outstanding members of the State now in high positions in the Nation's Capital. The event was held at the Alva Belmont House—headquarters of the National Woman's Party.

The list of honor guests included many pioneers or "firsts" to hold particular positions in the Capital. Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard is the first Hoosier to hold that Cabinet position. Called out of town at the last minute, he and Mrs. Wickard were unable to attend. But Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Director of the Selective Service (first on the list again from that State) was there, as was Mrs. Hershey and daughter, Ellen.

"When are the McNutts coming?" This question was on all

Harris & Ewing

MRS. BENJAMIN BRILL

Hoosiers' lips yesterday as they waited patiently for Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Man Power Board and Mrs. McNutt to show up. War business delayed Mr. McNutt, but when he did put in appearance with Mrs. McNutt near the end of the party—he had a surprise with him—Will Hays, Hollywood censor who also hails from Indiana.

Dr. Royd Sayers (first director of mines from Indiana) was there with Mrs. Sayers and their daughter, Joan. Mrs. Sayers was talking about her return from Germany just before the outbreak of the war. She lamented the fact that the pleasant, clean Germany of previous visits had disappeared and that her last memory of the country had to be spoiled by the Nazi scourge.

Velk Tells of Midway

George Velk (not a native, but he did go to school in South Bend) was holding court in the garden of the lovely old house. Having been on Midway Island with a construction battalion, he yesterday kept a crowd intrigued with a description of his adventures on the island.. He says there were no women (not even a nurse) or any liquor on the site at any time. Also, he confirmed many of the Japanese atrocity stories now going the rounds.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, whose late husband was from Indiana, explained that the big elm tree in the garden at the National Woman's Party's headquarters was carefully fed and doctored each year, usually to the tune of $50. When asked about the women's equal rights amendment, she laughingly replied: "I'm not talking about that today. This is the Hoosiers' fling."

Other Honor Guests

Among the other guests of honor were Commissioner Guy Mason and Mrs. Mason and Dr. Kathryn McHale, president of the American Association of University Women.

Representing the congressional delegation from Indiana were: Representative Douglas Whitlock, Senator Raymond E. Willis and Mrs. Willis, Representative Robert A. Grant and Mrs. Grant, Representative George W. Gillie and Mrs. Gillie, Representative John Boheme, jr., and Mrs. Boheme, Representative Louis Ludlow and Mrs. Ludlow.

Members of the hostess committee included: Mrs. Sayers, Mrs. Ludlow, Mrs. Douglas Whitlock, Mrs. Frederick Ballard, Mrs. John Hayes, Mrs. Camden MacAtee, Mrs. James L. Feiser, Mrs. James Hornaday, Mrs. Charles W. Risher, Mrs. Mark Thistlewaite, Mrs. Tom Shipp and Mrs. Everett Sanders.

Daughters of Hoosiers in Washington, pretty young girls in bright chintz dresses, assisted the hostesses during the afternoon. These were: Miss Katherine Kayser, Miss Joan Sayers, Miss Barbara Ballard, Miss Peggy Sanders and Miss Ellen Hershey.

JUST as soon as the war situation permits, the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs hopes to schedule an international convention in London or some other European capital. This was the desire expressed by Mrs. Jean Bennett, retiring president of the Soroptimist Federation at the Washington Soroptimist Club's luncheon yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

The meeting, which by the way was the last formal luncheon of the summer, was given over to convention reports by Washington delegates returned from the Cleveland conclave last week. Miss Edna Connolly, who pinch-hit as resolution chairman at the convention, reported that not only had Mrs. Bennett streamlined the convention, but kept business moving so fast that meetings came ahead of schedule.

Miss Estelle Zirkin, who served as teller for the convention, also gave highlights of the trip. Miss Zirkin, who is president of the Washington Club, presented a gold framed tribute to Mrs. Bennett from the local group.

Miss Emma Buechele, publicity chairman, announced that not only did the Washington Club bring back the first prize publicity trophy from the convention, but that this is the first time any one club in the Federation had received the prize twice.

Following convention reports, guests were introduced and a special musical program given. Barrington Sharman, baritone, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Jewell Downs, sang a group of songs.

Mrs. Flood Is Hostess

MRS. HENRY D. FLOOD, of Washington, who has been spending some time in Winchester, where she attended the wedding of her niece, Miss Margaret Byrd and Ensign Harry Stimpson on Saturday evening, was hostess at a luncheon for sixty guests on Sunday. Mrs. Flood is staying with her son, Bolling Flood, in Winchester.

Comers Now on Wedding Trip

After a short wedding trip in the South, Joseph H. Comer, jr., U. S. A. A. F. and his bride, the former Miss Vivian Gray Smith, will make their home in Georgia until August when the bridegroom will receive his commission.

Their marriage took place on Tuesday in the Wallace Memorial Presbyterian Church at 8:30 with the Rev. C. E. Hawthorne officiating. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Smith of Locust Hill, Md., formerly of Chevy Chase and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Comer of this city.

For her bridal costume, Mrs. Comer chose a white satin designed with fitted basque and full skirt ending in train, long sleeves and a neckline edged with seed pearls. Her full-length tulle veil was held with a coronet of the same material and she carried a white Testament covered with orchids and a shower of orange blossoms.

Matron of honor was the bride's sister, Mrs. Lawrence Emge, who was attired in orchid chiffon trimmed with lace and carried talisman roses matching her headdress. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Walter A. Smith, jr., Mrs. Jacques B. Hadler and Miss Elinor Marie Kane, wearing pastel shades of chiffon with bouquets of joanna hill roses. The bridegroom's father was best man and ushers included Walter A. Smith, jr., Gordon Crabill, William Armstrong and Donald McGeary.

The bride was graduated from Wilson Teachers College this year and Mr. Comer received his degree from George Washington University in 1941.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

House Votes Pay Raises To Custodial Workers

Pay raises for an estimated 190,000 Federal custodial workers, of whom about 25,000 are in the District, were voted yesterday by the House. However, the House, on motion of Representative Rees, Kansas Republican, limited the increases to employes in the first eight grades of the custodial service and grades 1 and 2 in the subprofessional service. It refused the Administration's proposal to jump the salaries of employes in grades 9 and 10 of the custodial service and to adjust the salaries of employes in grades from 13 to 17. The emasculated bill was passed by a standing vote of 109 to 7 but it surely would have been defeated if the higher-bracket changes had stayed in.

The real effect of the bill is to establish a $1200 minimum for full-time Federal workers. Employes now working at $960, $1080, and $1140 automatically would be boosted to $1200. Building guards who are paid starting salaries of $1200 would draw $1500 under the bill. Charwomen paid 50 and 55 cents an hour would get 65 and 70 cents. Journeymen mechanics whose starting salaries are $1680 would get $1860 under the bill. To all other employes in the custodial class the bill would guarantee a grade raise. For example, a grade 4 employe now paid $1320 would get $1500 and a grade 5 employe drawing $1500 would get $1680.

Ramspeck Objects

Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee objected strenuously to the Rees amendment that exempted grades 9 and 10 from the pay raise provisions. Starting salaries for the two grades are $2300 and $2600, respectively, and it was proposed to raise them to $2600 and $2800. The men in these jobs are supervisors and Ramspeck pointed out very clearly that there would be no incentive to be promoted to supervisor, as a supervisor could be paid less than straight employe under the bill. He was voted down, 2 to 1. However, the Senate is now holding hearings on the bill and it will surely correct this obvious injustice.

Ramspeck also made it plain that the custodial bill provided permanent changes in the Classification Act. He said that if Congress later approves a bonus or overtime bill the custodial employes would get that on top of the basic changes. Incidentally, by refusing to raise the salaries of employes paid as low as $2300 the House gave a clue on the reception it'll give to the Administration's plan to pay overtime to employes paid under $3800. It's now clear that the $3800 ceiling will have to be cut down. The Senate Civil Service Committee will report out the custodial bill within a few days. Early action is anticipated.

Dr. Hauser Appointed

Dr. Philip M. Hauser has been appointed assistant director of the Census Bureau. He was formerly assistant chief statistician of the population division . . . Civilian Conservation Corps will start handing out dismissal notices before the week is out . . . Office of Price Administration will have to release a few hundred of its employes here if the 75 million dollars appropriation goes through. No more employes are being hired . . . Agriculture employes will get at least seven days' pay on July 8 regardless of when the Congress approves its appropriation bill . . . Coleman Woodbury, executive director of the National Association of Housing Officials, soon will be appointed to a key job at National Housing.

Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau, has called on the Government and private industry to hire more older women—women over 35. Many agencies still won't hire older women if younger ones are available . . . A score of agencies have appealed to the Budget Bureau to raise their priority ratings but decisions have been postponed pending a proposed change in the rating system which is under study by the Man Power Commission. Internal Revenue recently was raised from grade 5 to grade 2 . . . The public members on the War Labor Board will split for the first time on the "little steel" wage dispute . . . Shoot Straight, Please

Those little rubber mats underneath the brass cuspidors at the Capitol are going the way of all scrap.

Speaker Sam Rayburn yesterday ordered Capitol Architect David Lynn to include them in an intensive rubber salvage hunt about the building and in Congressional offices. The goods collected have been turned in at the Navy Yard for reclaiming.

Talks a Good Fight

Gate City, Va., July 1 (AP).—Roy Preston Kane, 18-year-old Negro who registered yesterday is 43 inches tall and weighs 43 pounds, wants a "crack at those Japs" despite his size. "I want to be a spy or a commando," Kane said. "My size won't matter. I am so little I can hide easy. If a Jap catches me, I'll stomp on his toes and when he bends over, I'll cut his throat."

Potomac Park Dorms, Despite Objections, Await Only the President's Signature

ARCHITECT'S DRAWING of the type of girls' dormitory which the PBA is ready to build over the nine holes of West Potomac Park golf course

Dr. Bohanan To Resign His Pastorate

The Rev. Dr. Franklin J. Bohanan, for 16 years rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Parish, oldest Episcopal Church in the District, has announced his resignation because of illness. It will be effective September 1.

DR. BOHANAN

The congregation was founded in 1712—20 years before Washington's birth—and today has a membership of 3000. The parish church stands in Rock Creek Cemetery, at Rock Creek Church Road and Webster Street, near the Soldiers' Home.

"This action is one of the hardest things that I have had to do in my whole ministry of 40 years," the rector stated in a letter to his congregation regarding his resignation.

"Not only have I grown close to you all in my intimate associations with you, and to the old parish into which I have builded so much of myself, but I have come to love the little ones in our church school, many of whom I have held in my arms and dedicated to Christ in baptism. Some of these little ones I have instructed and presented for confirmation. I have seen them grow up, I have married some of them, and also baptized the babies of not a few."

Message to Vestry

In a message to St. Paul's vestry regarding his decision, Dr. Bohanan said in part:

"While even the thought of severing the ties which have bound us together for nearly 16 years is a grief and deep sorrow to me, I feel that in fairness to the parish I must make room for a stronger and more active man."

Dr. Bohanan has been practically incapacitated since the middle of January, and in the interim his pastoral duties have been carried on by the Rev. Charles W. Wood, assistant rector, and the Rev. William L. Mayo.

Active for many years in the work of the Washington Diocese, Dr. Bohanan was for 3 years chairman of the diocesan department of religious education; for 11 years chairman of its department of missions, and for 14 years member of its finance department. He also served on many special diocesan committees and was frequently a delegate to the General Episcopal Convention.

Church Debt Paid

A $66,000 church indebtedness has been paid off; a new parish house was built and equipped at the cost of $123,000; the Holy Comforter Mission Church of the parish has reached independency; 1200 families have become affiliated with the parish, and numerous other achievements recorded in his ministry.

Dr. Bohanan was born in St. Marys County, Md., receiving his early education in Warfield School, Carroll County. He later studied at St. John's Academy, Annapolis, and the General Theological Seminary, New York.

Imediately prior to coming to St. Paul's, he served as canon and secretary at the Washington Cathedral.

Naval Officer Found Dead in Gas-Filled Kitchen

A 43-year-old Navy officer was found dead last night in the gas-filled kitchen of his home in Alexandria by a neighbor who called to pay him a visit.

Lieut. Comdr. Albert Pendleton Taliaferro, jr., 505 Franklin Street, was discovered with his head partly in the oven of a gas stove. Police said that his left wrist was slashed and a razor blade was found beside his body.

Commander Taliaferro, a veteran of the First World War and a reserve officer attached to the administrative section of the Bureau of Aeronautics at the time of his death, was said to have been ill for the past week. His wife, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Taliaferro, was out of the city and efforts to contact her were being made last night.

The Navy officer was a native of Harrisonburg, Va., and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert P. Taliaferro of New York City. He is also survived by a brother, Lieut. Van B. Taliaferro, United States Navy.

Emmerich Answers Arguments on Choice Of Recreation Sites

While the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee was hearing arguments against construction of dormitories on portions of the Capitol Grounds adjoining Union Station Plaza, and the Public Buildings Administration was fending hecklers who object to the similar use of parts of Potomac Park, Herbert Emmerich, commissioner of FPHA came to bat for Washington's girl emergency workers with the biggest stick yet.

"The Government hasn't done very well by the girls they have brought in here—almost on demand—to help run the war machinery," Emmerich said. "The people who apparently want to deprive them of the simplest comforts had better learn that a lot more stretching than they dream of will have to come before this business is over.

"These youngsters can't be brought here and put in the outskirts of town or over the District line. Transportation is too uncertain now and is bound to get worse. Most of them are green and require recreation and some sort of supervision. They have a right to a bed and a chair and a parlor to entertain their dates, a place to dance and play bridge now and then, and we've had that in mind throughout the entire emergency planning period."

Dormitory Plans Cited

He pointed to the plans for eight dormitories to be constructed on Potomac Park land (as soon as President Roosevelt has signed the 12-million-dollar congressional appropriation) as an example of what Uncle Sam is trying to do for the new workers, even if a little belatedly.

Five dormitories will be built on Hains Point with 2140 rooms and 2245 beds. They will cover 4.4 acres on a 30-acre plot and will have a sufficient number of reading rooms, beauty parlors, parlors, etc., to accommodate the occupants.

Three will be built just north of the Polo Field with 1307 rooms and 1372 beds. The dormitories will cover 2.8 acres on 15 acres of land.

The proposed dormitory site on the Capitol Grounds includes three squares east of Union Station bounded by F, D and Second Streets Northeast and the Station Plaza; two lots on the west of the Station, south of the Post Office and adjoining North Capitol Street, and a lot on Constitution Avenue at New Jersey.

Bernard R. Tolson, manager of the Washington Terminal, pointed out that construction of the dormitories on the proposed sites would greatly increase congestion in the already jammed Union Station Plaza. He asked that some of the space be turned over instead to badly needed parking facilities.

The bill under consideration would transfer to the Public Buildings Administration for the duration authority over the six parcels of land. Hearings will resume at 10:30 this morning.

Indorsed by NHA

Yesterday, W. E. Reynolds, commissioner of the Public Buildings Administration, testified that the dormitories there were needed as "receiving homes" for two or three months for girls who would be brought here with no possibility of finding lodging.

The sites were endorsed in letters to the committee by the Federal Works Agency, the National Housing Authority and the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission.

Members of the committee, with Chairman Lanham (Democrat) of Texas in the lead, roundly condemned the Civil Service Commission for the importation of large numbers of workers who had not been assigned to jobs.

It was the practice of extending a "general invitation" to come here for work, Lanham asserted, that made the housing problem so complex. He pointed out that the station dormitories were being asked mainly for exactly this type of worker—women who were being brought here without job assignments and without having had their job qualifications tested.

Ferguson Confirmed As Housing Chief

The Senate yesterday confirmed the reappointment of Abner H. Ferguson of 3815 Huntington Street Northwest, as a Federal Housing Commissioner in the National Housing Authority.

Ferguson has been associated with Federal Housing agencies since 1934 when he was named assistant general counsel for the Federal Housing Administration. He was named a housing administrator in 1940.

Transit Group Will Testify on Crosstown Bus

Hearings on the new Military Road crosstown bus line proposed by the Public Utilities Commission will be resumed this morning at 10 o'clock in the District Building Board Room, with Capital Transit Co. representatives taking the stand.

Yesterday's session was given over almost entirely to spokesmen for the Citizens' Association, arguing for establishment of the line. The tenor of most of the pleas was for continuation of the feeder lines beyond the suggested termini, in order that certain sections might benefit.

Residents of Loughborough Road, Kent and Briarcliff asked that the proposed feeder line be extended past Nebraska Avenue down through those areas. A. D. Calvert, president of the Northeast Citizens' Association indorsed the main line, which would go eastward to the intersection of Twelfth and Quincy Streets, Northeast.

T. L. Sharkey, speaking for the 1200 employes of the Army Map Service asked that the Nebraska Avenue feeder line be extended on MacArthur Boulevard across the District line to serve the Map Service offices, which are nearly 2000 feet from the nearest street care or bus line.

Chevy Chase citizens took the stand again to protest the elimination of the Chevy Chase loop line, which the PUC held would be duplicated by the proposed Western Avenue feeder line.

D. C. Schools To Teach Agriculture

Board of Education Votes Expansion Of Vocational Work; Classes Start in Fall

Approval of expansion of vocational training to include agriculture was given yesterday by the Board of Education at its final meeting of the summer.

Scheduled to begin with the September term in white and Negro schools, the course is designed to provide three-year instruction of not less than seven hours a week, and will be given in day, night and summer classes.

The course, available to students from 14 years, is to be compiled by the heads of the departments after a comprehensive study of agricultural conditions and problems in this area. Instructors will have to be graduates of agricultural colleges, have a year of graduate work in education, at least three years experience in vocational agriculture instruction, and three years in administrative work.

Religious Study Rejected

The board rejected a proposal for religious instruction for students in all schools which would have permitted the student to spend one hour of school time each day in study of religion in the church of his faith.

Basis of the board's rejection of the proposal, presented by a joint committee of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish clergy last April, was that it would require seven school days during the year.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle was reelected for the sixth time to the presidency of the board, and Robert Maurer was reelected for the fourth time as vice president.

Proceeding with the annual docket, the board approved the use of 28 school buildings for gasoline registration. The buildings will be open from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. on July 9 and 10 and from 7 a. m. to 1 p. m. on Saturday, July 11.

Following a communication from the Custodial Employes Association, the board will urge the District Commissioners to recommend reclassification by the Civil Service Commission of school custodians. Under present classifications, the custodians, it was said, are not permitted a raise in pay and many are quitting.

Emilie Margaret White, teacher of Latin at Central High School since 1908, was appointed head of the new department of foreign languages.

Retirement of Dr. Elmer S. Newton, principal of Western High School, was aproved. Recommendations were read from groups and individuals for the appointment of Robert S. Anderson, assistant principal of Western High, to succeed Doctor Newton.

Acting Superintendent Named

The board extended permission to the War Department to use schoolrooms for the training of Government workers in typing and shorthand.

The following were appointed as acting superintendents while Superintendent Frank W. Ballou, is away, on vacation: Lawson J. Cantrell, Jere J. Crane, Dr. Chester W. Holmes, Dr. Carroll Reed and Robert L. Haycock. Named as acting superintendents for the Negro schools were Dr. Howard H. Long, Harold A. Haynes, Robert N. Mattingly, Leon L. Perry, A. Kiger Savoy and Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson.

Silver Spring Man Injured in Fall

Albert Buehler, 35, of 716 Sligo Avenue, Silver Spring, Md., grocery merchant, was injured yesterday in a fall from the roof of his garage while he was picking apples from a nearby tree.

Buehler slipped and fell about 14 feet to the ground, receiving a severe back injury. While the rescue squad of the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department administered first aid, Buehler fainted twice. He was taken to the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Md.

14 St. Floating Bridge Completed; Civilian Traffic to Have Use of Span by End of Month

NEW PONTOON BRIDGE spanning the Potomac is primarily designed for emergency movements of troops. It has been constructed by Army engineers midway between the Highway and Railroad Bridges

Partial relief for the Washington-Virginia traffic bottle-neck is in prospect before the end of July, following announcement by the War Department of the opening yesterday of the Fourteenth Street floating bridge crossing the Potomac between the old Fourteenth Street span and the railroad bridge.

Although the bridge, first of four to be constructed here, was first used by a jeep-load of engineers yesterday morning, the War Department will not allow regular civilian traffic until the approaches are completed between now and the first of next month. Work on it was begun May 1.

The Washington terminus is at Riverside Drive, at the foot of the Rose Garden, and the Virginia approach is from U. S. Highway No. 1, just south of the Fourteenth Street bridge.

Of the three other bridges under construction or planned, two will cross the Potomac and the third will span the Anacostia.

The Wisconsin Avenue Bridge will cross the Potomac and Little Rivers from the foot of Wisconsin Avenue to the George Washington Memorial Parkway.

The Constitution Avenue Bridge will connect the Potomac Parkway near Constitution Avenue and the Virginia highway system off the upper end of Columbia Island.

To the southeast, the Army is building the Virginia Avenue Bridge from the end of M Street to the Anacostia Parkway.

The first of the four bridges, which long have been advocated by many leading traffic enginers, is constructed of 30 plank covered pontoons with an asphalt coating for the 12-foot-wide bridge floor. There is a fixed steel span on the Virginia side providing an opening 50 feet wide and 21 feet high to permit passage of boats. The bridge continues across the Memorial Parkway, two 55-foot spans holding it above the highway level.

With the lifting of censorship with which the Army has veiled its transPotomac activities, announcement also came that the Constitution Avenue Bridge was nearly completed and that the output of pontoons, being constructed at Seventeenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, will soon be increased to eight per wek with a commensurate speed up in construction of the last two.

Owner Recovers $1000 Violin Pawned for $3

A violin valued at $1000, but which had been pawned for a paltry $3 was recovered by police yesterday and returned to its owner, a local dance band musician.

Mario DelBianco of Brooklyn, N. Y., who plays with the orchestra at the Del Rio Club here under the professional name of Marty Brill, reported the instrument stolen from his automobile parked at Fifteenth and L Streets Northwest, Monday.

The thieves, he told police, slashed the canvas top of his convertible and also made away with $50 worth of his wife's dresses. He said the violin was a Guarnerius for which he paid $1000.

Detective Sergt. George Cook discovered the violin in a Fourth Street Northwest second-hand dealer's store, where it had been pawned by a Negro. The thief was not apprehended.

Barney Children Collect Rubber

The 200 children attending Barney Neighborhood House summer vacation school bounced into the rubber salvage campaign this week and tomorrow morning their motley collection of old rubber boots, inner tubes, bicycle tires and toys will be weighed in.

Winners will be awarded points which will count toward a special end-of-the-summer vacation. Details will be announced later by Head Resident Margaret B. Merrill.

At 11 o'clock tomorrow morning, the children will don colonial costumes and present a play, "The Story of America."

Arcade Laundry Opinion Filed

A 91-page opinion recommending dismissal of contempt charges against the Arcade Sunshine Laundry was filed in the United States Court of Appeals yesterday by Charles F. Wilson, a "special master" assigned by the court to investigate alleged violation of the National Labor Relations Act by the company, it's president, and other officials.

Basis for the recommendation is that the citation for contempt is unsubstantiated.

The case arose from charges by the NLRB that the firm had urged its employes not to join a C. I. O.

Sale of Auto Use Stamps Declines In Washington

Sale of $5 automobile use stamps fell off nearly 50 per cent from Tuesday's 53,000, offering a minor surprise to postoffice authorities, who had made plans to handle a rush by motorists who failed to buy them before the Tuesday midnight deadline.

Through Tuesday, sales had reached a total of 139,894 in Washington, and yesterday's 25,000 to 30,000 estimate still leaves the District some 20,000 short of the 192,841 figure tabulated in the sale of six-month stamps in February.

"Pride of the Yankees" To Have Special Premiere

Tickets Now on Sale for Keith Opening July 29; Comedienne Launched by a Trained Seal; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

"PRIDE OF THE YANKEES," Samuel Goldwyn's widely discussed biographical picture, based on the life of the late Lou Gehrig, is to be given its Washington premiere in RKO-Keith's Theater, on Wednesday night, July 29, under circumstances that will be something pretty special for midsummer.

GARY COOPER

Starring Gary Cooper in the title role, with Teresa Wright—who gives such an impressive performance in the forthcoming "Mrs. Miniver"—in the role of his wife, "Pride of the Yankees" will be offered first at a single, reserved-seat performance for which a uniform price of $1.10 will be charged, tax included. Tickets are now on sale at the boxoffice, with the express proviso that only the actual seating capacity of the house will be sold. No pushing and hauling or scrambling for preferred locations and no standing-room on the night of the opening.

Having learned from past experience that a large proportion of Capital theatergoers prefer to "see 'em first," when that can be accomplished comfortably, the RKO-Keith management is placing the tickets on sale a full four weeks in advance for the convenience of those who are eager to see what has been uniformly pronounced by those who have followed its progress from the sets, through the daily "rushes" to the cutting-room and finished form, one of the great pictures of the year. It is said to afford not only splendid entertainment—in which the baseball diamond is only incidental—but an emotional quality that the screen to rarely manages to apprehend. Mrs. Lou Gehrig herself, who followed every step of production, is one of the most enthusiastic in her praise of the finished product and, more especally, of the work contributed to it by Cooper and Miss Wright, as her husband and herself.

Others in the cast include Walter Brennan, Babe Ruth, Veloz and Yolanda, famous dancers; Ray Noble and His Orchestra and many celebrities of the big leagues. The screen play, incidentally, was written by Paul Gallico, famous sports writer since turned author—if that isn't too fine a distinction without much difference.

The smart ones probably already are lined up at the Keith boxoffice with their pelf in their paws.

The local drama desks will be treated to a whiff of sage brush and the wide open spaces this afternoon, beginning at 4, when Roy Rogers, Republic's ace cowboy star, here to headline the new stage bill at the Earle, opening Friday, will hold comparatively open house in his suite at the Willard. We are not certain whether or not the members of his "Sons of the Pioneers" band will be on hand for the soiree, but are informed with some emphasis that Trigger, Rogers' highly intellectual Palomino high school horse, definitely will not. Probably didn't want to show up the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the press!

Signed, Sealed and Delivered!

CYNDA GLENN, announced as headliner of the stage bill opening tomorrow at Loew's Capitol Theater, presents a routine of antic comedy that is reported to run the gamut from fruit to nuts. Miss Glenn insists that it is mostly "nuts" and that she can thank a trained seal for the success of her career as a zany comedienne. It seems the seal bit her. And of all places! The audience thought it was very, very funny and from that moment history in the theater was in the making.

To understand why, one must know that Miss Glenn started out as a dancer and was doing right well until she was thrown from a horse, breaking both legs and both wrists. Discharged from the hospital after a couple of months, she attempted to resume dancing, only to learn from further X-ray examinations that fractures of the pelvic bone structure had not been discovered the first time. More months in the hospital. Maybe she could be a mimic. But the public said no. So she changed her name, took on a girl partner and sailed for South America as a comedy act. She clicked, returned to Paris, appeared in musical comedies, revues, operattas, night clubs and pictures and starred at the "Folies Bergere." Clifford Fischer saw her and brought her back to America to star in his first "French Casino" show in New York. It was there that Pal, the seal, belied his name and proved how funny Cynda really could be with proper encouragement!

There are those who have wondered what would have happened if this Cynda-rella had bitten the seal first!

Washingtonians wanted him a second week. So he is staying a second week. That would be Irv Carrol and his Solovox Rhythms, that have been playing to full passenger lists aboard the Potomac Line's S. S. Potomac every night since his engagement started. The craft leaves its dock at Seventh Street and Maine Avenue Southwest, every night at 8:45 o'clock for one of those refreshing moonlight cruises down the river, with two sailings on Saturday, at 8:45 p. m., and 12:30 a. m. which doesn't sound quite so late if you call it midnight. This weekend, the steamer will make two trips to Colonial Beach, one Saturday and one Sunday, leaving at 9 a. m., both days, and returning at 8 p. m. Plenty of time for a swim, the resort amusements, etc. Those sailing on Saturday can arrange a stopover at the beach until Sunday without extra charge. So now you know.

The Thursday night "request revivals" of old favorite films, which for weeks has been the policy of the Senator Theater, over at Minnesota Avenue and Benning Road Northeast, has turned up a nice double-feature bill for this week. Tonight's double-header will consist of "Waterloo Bridge," Vivien Leigh's first after her overwhelming hit in "GWTW," and "My Son, My Son," a splendid picture, even if it does not approximate the strength of Howard Spring's novel from which it was adapted. Patrons of the Senator are urged to suggest the pictures they would like to have brought back. They are booked as soon after receipt of the requests as can be arranged.

Tramp-Tramp-Tramp-Etc. Note

Just as we suspected, the last four of that detachment of "Ten Gentlemen From West Point" just marched in and have the situation well in hand!

WALTER BRENNAN AND GARY COOPER

The picture will open locally with a special premiere performance at RKO-Keith's Theater the night of July 29

Lt. Jimmy Stewart Visits Studio Pals

Lieut. James Stewart, with one day's leave from his northern California airfield camp, spent it like this: He came to the M-G-M studios to visit old friends, wrote personal letters to Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powell, Virginia O'Brien, Milton Berle and all who came with them and helped give the camp show for which Jimmy was responsible. Then he arranged about putting his house up for rent. That was the lieutenant's day off.

Music Duplicates Razing Turmoils

Here's a job that isn't as simple as it appears on the surface.

Musicians had to reproduce exactly the sounds made by a huge electric drill as it bores into metal four stories in the air for a scene in Paramount's murder mystery, "Streets of Chance." The film, co-starring Burgess Meredith and Clarie Trevor, features a background of mood music, and opens with a building being torn down amid a melody representing street and traffic sounds.

HEDDA HOPPER

Charming, But It Didn't Take!

Hollywood, Calif., July 1.—After watching Ginger Rogers and Cary Grant do a charming love scene in "Once Upon a Honeymoon," I began wondering if that wouldn't carry on to an off-screen romance. They were certainly putting their hearts into it.

GINGER ROGERS

Ginger plays a baroness, and was reciting Browning and Schopenhauer, trying to convince Newshawk Cary that she's not the former hoofer he thinks she is. He recited sweet and low Irving Berlin lyrics right back to her. It was quite impressive, and had I been in Ginger's place, I would have tried to carry it right on out into my own garden.

Cary tells me he wants to do a picture with the famous producer Cantinflas, Mexico's Charlie Chaplin. Cary met him a year ago in the middle of a Mexican bull ring during a festival, and at that time he didn't know who the little man was. Later he met him with Chaplin.

He says Cantinflas' film "Neither Blood Nor Sand" outsold "Gone With the Wind" in South America.

If these brawls continue, Warners will have to send a bodyguard when their stars go a-partying. On the same night of the slugging at Errol Flynn's, Humphrey Bogart and his wife attended a party at the Sam Pages, and staged a dilly of a battle.

When Bogey carried his screen self into private life, his wife said, "Skip it, Bogey—nobody wants you to act." He continued, and the battle was on—and what a battle!

And going back to the Flynn fracas, a prominent producer and his wife crashed the party, and after the knockout blow went around to all the servants and said, "if word of this leaks out, none of you will ever work for a Beverly Hills family again." After what happened, you wouldn't think they'd want to, would you?

Joan Crawford's picture was held up a week because Irene couldn't finish her dresses on time—which gave Joan a chance to practice up on one of her scenes—dishing out ice cream.

And what was Alice Glazer's surprise the other night, when she went into a local ice cream parlor to buy some, to find Joan beautifully dressed, flanked by two handsome escorts, dishing it out, making change, and doing a good job of it! Then they pitched in and ate up the profits.

When Capt. Colin Kelly's widow returned from making speeches, parades and so forth in the East, she went directly from the plane to her job as secretary. Didn't see son Corky until she got back from work that night.

A little skulduggery went on out Sunset way the night Felix Young opened the Troc. Charlie Morrison gave a private party free to hundreds of friends at the Mocambo. Now Lena Horne sings at the Mocambo. Ethel Waters at the Troc.

That reminds me of a remark Felix made years ago when a friend said, "How can you speak to that guy after what he's done to you?" "Listen, if I stopped talking to people for what they've done to me, I wouldn't even speak to myself."

Did you know Jimmy Dorsey won't wear glasses because he'd look too much like his brother Tommy? Yet they like each other.

A real feud is brewing between Lupe Velez and Mapy Cortes, 'cause Mapy thinks perhaps Lupe planted the story that she was married to her dance partner, Fernando. Mapy claims he's her brother.

Pix

The gloom-chasing team of Leon Errol and Lupe Velez are carrying on their screwball antics again in another of the "Spitfire" series.

In their latest epic, entitled "Mexican Spitfire Sees a Ghost," they are convulsing local audiences at the Pix Theater in a wacky story of ghosts, saboteurs and double identities. Donning the make-up of Lord Epping, Uncle Matt (Leon Errol) entertains his lordship's guests at his estate in order to help out the young partner of Lord Epping's advertising firm. All goes well until the saboteurs, who are hiding out in the cellar with enough nitroglycerine to blow up half the country, start staging a ghost campaign to scare the guests away.

As though this wasn't enough, the real Lord Epping returns (as though you wouldn't know it) and adds to the general confusion. The highlight of the picture is a riotous scene in which Lord Epping and Uncle Matt, impersonating Lord Epping, alternate at a poker game thoroughly confushing everybody and keeping the audience in stitches.

Uncle Matt and Carmelita finally straighten out everything to the extent of saving the firm, capturing the spies and carrying off the impersonation to a successful conclusion. Lupe Velez and her scrambled English have a field day making the complicated situations even more mixed up, while Leon Errol cavorts with ease and energy in his double role. Supporting players include "Buddy" Rogers, Elisabeth Risdon and Donald MacBride.

Another spook comedy is the co-feature. "Whispering Ghosts" serves as a background for a carload of gags by Milton Berle, who serves as its star. Most of the action takes place aboard an old, deserted schooner and all the trimmings peculiar to mystery stories are there. And the film does not lack for bloodshed or desperate characters.

Berle plays a radio crime detective who reopens a murder case only to be involved himself. Brenda Joyce as the dead man's niece, and the other principals converge at the scene of the crime. The lure is diamonds, supposedly hidden on the boat, which turn out to be nothing more than glass stones, but meanwhile the murderer is afoot.

Through some ingenious thinking and some rapid gags, Berle turns up the culprit and walks off with the girl and the reward. Most of the jokes are not up to the usual Berle standard but the radio comedian does nicely with what he has. The supporting cast includes John Shelton, John Carradine and Willie Best. E. L. S.

Time's Toll

Bonita Grenville, not yet 18, is already feeling the first pinch of years. She has to be made to look at least three years younger for her role in "Now, Voyager."

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, July 1.

Wendell Willkie may see President Roosevelt this week. In the meantime, the United City Party—the independent organization which was formed last year to support Mayor LaGuardia—is supporting Willkie for governor . . . Brig. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle is in town, trying to recuperate some of the 14 pounds he lost on his trip to Tokyo . . . King Peter is slated to meet Joe Louis and Joe DiMaggio . . . Ted Husing's 15-year association with C. B. S. may terminate this week, at Husing's request. Ted will be busy, for the duration of the war, broadcasting the "Cheers From the Camps" program, from Washington.

WILLIAM SAROYAN

William Saroyan arrived in New York last weekend. Saturday night he met Corp. Robert Hopkins of the United States Signal Corps. Hopkins suggested that the Signal Corps might use Saroyan's writing talents . . . "What kind of pictures do you make?" asked the writer . . . "You may consider them dull," said Hopkins, "but they're technical pictures. For instance—'How to Manipulate a Machine Gun" . . . "Wonderful," said Saroyan. "For me—that's a plot."

Nick the Greek felt such a yearning for a dice game that he finally succumbed to the sucker-lure of Las Vegas and lost $100,000 . . . William Hickey, the London Express' columnist who was here a few months ago, was elected to Parliament last week on a program in which he described himself as "Local Boy With a National Reputation." His boss, Lord Beaverbrook, gave him only one suggestion—to wear a hat. "That," advised Beaverbrook, "will make you a respectable candidate" . . . Dr. Leo C. Rosten and Leonard Spigelgass, who left their Hollywood jobs to work in Washington, submitted their resignations to Lowell Mellett on Saturday.

In 1912 George Jean Nathan, H. L. Mencken and Willard Huntington Wright began to collaborate on a book, "Europe After 8:15." The trio of eminent writers required two years to finish it. On the first day of publication, 400 copies were sold. And on the following day, the World War began—which killed the sales, and not a single copy was sold thereafter . . . A copy of that book now is worth $60. Not because the names of Nathan, Mencken and Wright are important in the field of letters, but only because the unknown artist who did the illustrations now has become America's best-known painter—Thomas Benton.

Gertrude Niesen's much-publicized home in Newport soon may be sold . . . Raymond Gram Swing, whose N. B. C. series with John Gunther begins on September 23, will receive more for this sustaining program than he had received for his commercial series . . . On Saturday the front pages reported the old Parrot-at-the-Auction joke which the President told Churchill. "If old gags make a good statesman," complains Milton Berle, "then the wrong Berle is with the State Department" . . . To avoid union difficulties, the Teamsters Union gave honorary memberships to all the girls who work at the Father Duffy Canteens. The union presented two canteens to that organization.

Because of the $5000 limitation on the cost of all movie-sets, Alfred Hitchcock is using real buildings and streets, for his new picture, "Shadow of a Doubt." By arrangement with the local Chamber of Commerce, Hitchcock took over the whole town of Santa Rosa, Calif., roped off the streets, and made the small-town shots he needed. This week he's using the slum section of Newark, N. J., for another group of sequences . . . Because Hitchcock hasn't as yet signed a leading man for that picture—and therefore doesn't know whether he'll be tall, short or average—three "Doubles," all dressed alike, are being used; one tall, one short, and one of average height. Each scene is filmed three times, once with each "double."

Sam Wood, who directed "Pride of the Yankees," started to tell Bob Meusel, the old Yankee player, how he wanted a baseball thrown. Meusel, whose throwing arm was one of the best known in baseball, challenged Wood to a throwing contest, from center field in Wrigley Field. Wood, a former sempro ballplayer, beat him . . . Artie Shaw reports for Navy duty this week.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

one of the most prodigious juvenile stars the cinema can boast, who, season after season, was the world's No. 1 attraction at the boxoffice, now is blossoming out into radiant young womanhood. To be seen next as "Miss Annie Rooney"—the "Little" was too diminutive—she here betrays a lively interest in various convenient items of "grown-up" concern, barring, possibly, the "boarding-school-girl" wall decorations

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Annie Picks Herself a Plum!

Hollywood, July 1 (INS).—If Ann Sheridan has been weeping tears over losing the Texas Guinan role, she can dry them. Ann gets the part of one of the most unforgettable songbirds of all time, the one and only Nora Bayes, in "Shine on Harvest Moon," right on her home lot, Warners. What memories the thought of Nora, and her partner-husband, Jack Norworth, brings back. When she died several years ago, one of the brightest lights Broadway has ever known was dimmed—but not forgotten! Warm-hearted and gay, her only fault was an open purse ready and filled for any touch.

ANN SHERIDAN

Jack Norworth arrived in Hollywood today to huddle with twin producers Julius and Phil Epstein about Nora's life story. Incidentally, this is the Epstein freres' first producing assignment after years of writing.

Jean Pierre Aumont, M-G-M's French import, should be finding Hollywood interesting. Not only has he had several dates with Joan Crawford, but his first picture here, "Assignment in Brittany," is almost ready for the cameras. It concerns a British agent working on the Continent. Aumont should be able to give the script writers some pertinent tips on this subject. He was a French soldier with the tank corps on the Belgium border at the time France fell to the German invaders and his escape to England, and later his trip to this country, is an adventure story in itself.

Ann Sothern loves her "Maisie" pictures and she is going to stick to them. But she also has ambitions to take a flyer into something else once in a while, and I must say the dramatic role of the girl in the high adventure story, "One Thousand Shall Fall," is something different for Miss Maisie. Edward Knopf is producing this exciting book by Hans Habe, for M.-G.-M., and one day he happened to be lunching with Ann and told her about the story of Habe's escape from a prison camp. "If there's a girl's role in there I would love to play it," Ann said, much to Eddie's surprise. But, being a smart producer, he wasn't so surprised that he didn't take her up on that right then and there.

Rebel Randell says her engagement is off with Radio Announcer Peter Potter; Corinne Griffith may stage a movie comeback in "The Commandos." She's up for a top role; Leslie Howard is returning to this country to do a tour of America—and Canada—this fall.

Raimu in Brilliant Performance In 'Man Who Seeks Truth,' Little

By Ernest L. Schier.

The advisability of exposing oneself to the knowledge of human frailties is now on display at the Little Theater for all to view and ponder over. Whether to accept friends at their face value, or to probe beneath the surface, is a problem which deserves thought.

In "The Man Who Seeks the Truth," we find one such gentleman, who portrayed a modern Diogenes with questionable results. While the title of the picture indicates an honorable intention, we question the original motivation of the truth-seeker. Portrayed by Raimu, one of the most distinguished of French actors, a respected and honest banker sets out to learn the truth about his fiancee's feelings for him and in so doing learns more than he bargained for. To test her, he pretends to be deaf and overhears many conversations not intended for his ears.

His first great awakening comes from the employes in his own bank, whose usual morning pleasantries turn to gentle insults as he smilingly strolls into his office. Quick on the heels of this revelation comes the knowledge that his brother and sister-in-law have been sponging off him for some 30 years and as a result of his pretended infirmity are laying plans to swindle him out of even larger sums than in the past. Even his trusted butler of many years of service snarls down the back of his neck as he solicitously serves him his dinner. The final pay-off comes when he learns that the partner of his fiancee's clandestine affair is his own adopted son!

Wiser, But Unhappier

The result of all his snooping can be summed up by saying he is a wiser but definitely unhappier man. We are somewhat amazed that a banker could be so naive, for we were always taught to believe that bankers knew everything about everybody and demanded considerable collateral before entering into any kind of relationship. So if you want to confine your company to your favorite canine friend, just go round sticking your nose into other people's business and it won't be long before you'll be sending out an S O S to Dale Carnegie.

As for us, we shall be content to sit back and gaze on the passing scene without exposing ourselves to disillusionment and cynicism. Raimu adds considerable prestige to his American reputation with a performance that simply bubbles over with wit and sardonic humor. His misguided fiancee is played with understanding and gentleness by the lovely Jacqueline Delubac. Alerme, well known for his comic performances in many French movies, bounces cheerfully through the part of the middle-aged brother, whose favorite pastime is pursuing maidens whose tender years appeal to his so-called chivalry. Direction and photography are both good and the music by Adolphe Borchard is both light and humorous in the proper vein.

A Technicolor short, narrated by John Nesbitt of "Passing Parade" fame is highly informative in disclosing the early history of the American flag and how it came about. The program is finished off with the latest newsreel pictures of events here and on the war fronts.

Kibbee in New Skelton Picture

For the first time in 10 years Guy Kibbee is missing a long-standing early season trout fishing date with an angling pal in Oregon.

Reason is a strong character role assigned to him at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Kibbee will play Judge Lee, somewhat bibulous lawyer in "Whistling In Dixie," with Red Skelton again in his role of Wally Benton, and Ann Rutherford as Carol. This photoplay carries on the screwball adventures of a radio detective which had their start in "Whistling In the Dark."

Bosox, Taking Pair, Close In as Yanks Lose

A's Defeat Champs, 5-4, With Rally

Murphy's Error In Ninth Inning Enables Suder to Score From Second

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 1.—The Athletics climaxed an uphill battle tonight by shoving over a run in the ninth inning to beat the New York Yankees, 5 to 4, before 18,881 at Shibe Park. The defeat cut the Yanks' lead over the second place Boston Red Sox to three games.

Pete Suder scored the winning run on a wild throw by relief pitcher Johnny Murphy.

With the score tied at 4-4 Suder opened the A's half of the ninth by beating out an infield tap and stopped at second on Billy Knickerbocker's one-baser. Luman Harris, the third A's pitcher, then laid down a bunt. Murphy fielded it, but threw the ball into left field trying to get Suder at third.

Five Hits for Yanks

The Yanks, although held to five hits, took a 4-to-0 lead in the four innings off Bob Harris, but the Athletics rallied to tie by scoring twice in the fifth and twice in the seventh.

The league leaders scored first in the third, when Phil Rizzuto walked, reached third on Ed Kearse's single and raced home as Frank Crossetti forced Kearse at second.

In the third, Joe DiMaggio hit his eleventh homer of the season. Then Charley Keller tripled and beat Buddy Blair's throw to the plate on Flash Gordon's grounder. Gordon stole second, advanced on a wild pitch and came home as Rizzuto grounded out.

Murphy Takes Over

The Athletics got two runs in the fifth on singles by Bob Swift and Knickerbocker, an infield out and Mike Kreevich's single. Murphy relieved Marvin Breuer in this frame.

In the seventh Knickerbocker doubled and scored on a triple by Elmer Valo. Hal Wagner batted for Tex Shirley and singled Valo home with the tying run.

Loving Wins Mass. Open Golf Play-off

By the Associated Press

Osterville, Mass., July 1.—An exceptionally smooth par-72 performance enabled Ben Loving, little Longmeadow professional, to outscore an erratic Les Kennedy of Cambridge, by six strokes today in their 18-hole play-off for the Massachusetts Open golf title at Oyster Harbors.

They forced the sixth extra title match in the tourney's 36-year history yesterday when they completed the regulation 72-hole competition with 286 totals.

While Loving and Kennedy were finishing on even terms yesterday, Harold (Jug) McSpaden, of Philadelphia, the defending champion and four-time winner, gained third money by totaling 287, a stroke less than the other topflight competitor in the starting field of 75. Red Sox Defeat Nats In Twin Bill, 3-2, 7-1

Buck Newsom and Jack Wilson Beaten as Sox Gain on Yankees; Nats Held to 10-Hit Total

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Boston, July 1.—Boston's pennant aspirations suffered no set-back here today. The Red Sox played the Nats twice and the Nats created no upsets, dropping the first game, 3-2, and the night cap, 7-1, to run their latest losing streak to four games.

The Red Sox thus captured their second double-header from the Nats in two days. Buck Newsom was the victim of the Nats' anemic hitting in the opener and Jack Wilson, Ray Scarborough and Alex Carrasquel collaborated in losing the second game, with Wilson being charged with the defeat.

Washington didn't exactly knock down any fences. In the first game Ken Chase and Yank Terry restricted the Nats to five hits and Joe Dobson duplicated that performance in the nightcap as the Boston infield produced four spiffy double plays.

Some 11,000 fans saw the Nats put up a battle for that second game—until the fifth inning. By that time the Red Sox owned only a 1-0 lead as the result of Dom DiMaggio's double and a brace of infield outs in the third, but Wilson located Boston bats frequently in a 4-run fifth inning.

Wilson, who had walked three straight Red Sox with two out in the first inning but escaped damage, opened the fifth by walking Dobson. DiMaggio sacrificed and Wilson then walked Johnny Pesky. Lou Finney inserted a single to right, scoring Dobson and shifting Pesky to third and Ted Williams deposited a double in center field, scoring Pesky and Finney.

On that hit, incidentally, Williams merely jogged a triple into a double and when he finally scored as the result of Bobby Doerr's single and Ulysses Lupien's infield tap, Manager Joe Cronin retired him for the day, sending Pete Fox to left field.

No Help for Buck

That 5-0 lead was improved to 7-0 proportions in the seventh as Boston belted Scarborough for two more runs. Pesky, Lupien and Jim Tabor contributed singles and Finney slammed a double in the inning.

Washington scored its only run in the eighth when Jake Early walked, took third on Johnny Sullivan's double and scored as Ellis Clary was thrown out by Pesky.

The Nats gave Newsom precious little help in that first game, abandoning him after scoring two runs. Newsom himself made one of the Nats' five hits and gave it a great try before accepting his latest defeat.

Newsom was opposed by Chase and Terry, and he had the speed of the trio despite the ten hits he allowed. He put on another of his shows with his frequent lazy slow-balling and wrangling with the umpires but he failed twice to hold onto one-run leads.

Roy Cullenbine set Newsom up in a 1-0 lead when he had walked and stole second. But the Nats had

White, Cards Blank Pirates By 4-0 Count

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 1.—Ernie White, last year's freshman star of the Cardinals who has had difficulty getting started this season, blanked Frankie Frisch's Pittsburgh Pirates, 4 to 0, on six hits today as the Cards clipped a half game off the lead of the idle Brooklyn Dodgers.

Troubled with a sore arm early in the season, White had won only two games against four defeats prior to today's contest. His last victory was on May 25, when he took a 10-to-2 decision from the Chicago Cubs. He had appeared in only two other games since that date.

The excellent comeback performance of this big, blond left-hander should serve as a healthy shot in the arm to the Cardinals, who almost slipped out of the pennant picture on their recent road trip. White had perfect control, striking out two batters and failing to issue a single base on balls.

Pete Coscarart who led off the sixth inning with a double, was the only runner to reach third base on White. He advanced on Elbie Fletcher's grounder to first but died at the hot corner when Elliott flew out to Slaughter.

The Cards bunched three singles, a sacrifice and a long fly to score two runs in the third off Ken Heintzelmann, who has shut out the Cards twice this year.

Walker Cooper led off the fourth inning with a double to left and scored on Ray Sanders' single to center. A walk and two singles off Aldon Wilkie produced the final run in the eighth.

Shining Light was second and Cincture third, while Nearly, a convincing winner in her three previous starts, finished far back in the field.

Owen Tudor, 5 to 2 favorite, captured the historic gold cup, taking the lead about halfway and easily outlasting Afterthought, which was second. Lovely Trim finished third.

7 Runs in First Beat Chisox For Tribe, 7-2

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 1.—The first seven Cleveland batters that faced Orval Grove, Chicago White Sox freshman hurler, in the first inning today scored to give Al Smith more than the margin he needed for his seventh victory, 7 to 2. It was the Indians' third straight triumph in the series.

Jake Wade, veteran southpaw picked up by the Chicagoans as a free agent a month ago, made his first extensive appearance in replacing Grove before a man had been retired in the first inning. He held the Indians to three hits while accomplishing 27 outs, with no runs charged against him. Previously he had made only two pitches for the White Sox at Boston.

Lou Scoffic Named La Crosse Manager

La Crosse, Wis., July 1 (AP).—Appointment of Lou Scoffic, Three-Eye League batting champion and Decatur manager in 1940, as manager of the La Crosse Blackhawks of the Wisconsin State League, was announced today.

Scoffic, who managed the Fresno team in the California State League until the circuit disbanded last Saturday, succeeds Eddie Konetchy, former St. Louis Cardinal first baseman, who has been given a leave of absence because of ill health.

Swede Breaks World Record for Mile Run

Gunnar Hagg Smashes Wooderson's Mark After Eight-Month Lay-off

By the Associated Press

Goteborg, Sweden, July 1.—Slightly built Gunnar Haag celebrated his return to action tonight after an eight-month suspension by smashing Sydney Wooderson's world record for the 1-mile run.

Lifted from the suspended list only yesterday, the slim Swedish middle-distance ace zipped through the distance in 4m. 6.2s., one-fifth of a second faster than the accepted standard Wooderson set up five years ago.

In chalking up the mark, Hagg barely beat out Arne Andersson, who was clocked in 4:06.4, equalling Wooderson's time.

(The 4:06.4 standard is recognized as the world mark for the mile over a standard track. The fastest mile ever run was the 4:04.4 by Glenn Cunningham, the Kansas Great, on March 3, 1938, over Dartmouth's huge track, 6 2-3 laps to the mile. This is listed in the books as an American record on a course of "more than 220 yards to the lap.")

Set Another Mark

The mile mark is the second Hagg will have up for consideration if and when the International Amateur Athletic Federation meets again—probably after the war—to approve new records. Last year, he turned in a 3:47.6 performance for the 1500 meters, one-fifth of a second faster than the existing standard posted by Jack Lovelock in the 1936 Olympic games.

Hagg, who is in his mid-twenties, has been one of Sweden's top middle-distance runners for the past four or five years. Last fall, he ran into difficulties with the Swedish amateur authorities over expense accounts and was ruled off until July 1. Tonight's job of running was his first since the ban was placed on him.

(Recently, Swedish sources in the United States said they had been informed Hagg is planning to visit America this month or later in the summer.)

Parks to Fight On Benefit Boxing Card

Georgia Parks, the hard hitting Greensboro (N. C. colored scrapper who brought Gus Mirman's winning streak to an abrupt ending a few weeks ago with his second round kayo, has volunteered to fight on next Monday night's benefit boxing show at Griffith Stadium.

Parks will be pittted against one "Dynamite" Walker of New Jersey, a newcomer, in a six-rounder on the card to raise money to aid the family of the late Preston Drew, who lost his life following a match at the ball park.

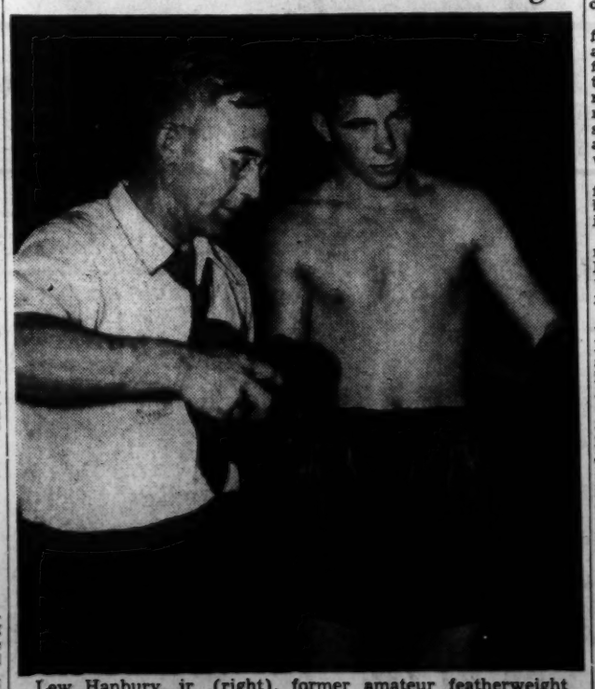
Having fought on the ill-fated show, Parks told Promoter Joe Turner he was glad to do his bit. Just turned 19, Parks provided a violent upset that night when in the second round, after carefully eluding Mirman's roundhouse punches, the Carolina battler uncorked one from home plate and sent the "Butcher Boy" reeling on Queer Street. Parks was a 5-to-1 underdog.

There will be 9 fights and 46 rounds on this Cavalcade of Swing, and judging by the interest and advance sale, Promoter Turner is anticipating a turnout of some 5000 persons for this benefit show.

Jimmy DeChard, beaten only once in nine starts, will headline the show, facing Al Reiss, a Detroit heavyweight with 100 professional matches behind him. DeChard has been working out nightly at the Apollo gym along with the Petro brothers, Danny and Charlie, who fight in a pair of fours.

Leon Kennedy, a Howard University student, has been matched against Billy Harris in a four-rounder. The card will be completed as soon as Turner secures an opponent for Eddie Kane.

Father-Son Combination of Boxing



Lew Hanbury, jr. (right), former amateur featherweight champion, will seek his second straight pro victory Monday night at Griffith Stadium when he faces Wayman Stewart on the benefit card for the family of the late Preston Drew, who lost his life from injuries received in the ring. Lew's father, a former Navy boxer who manages his son, is tying on the gloves in a recent workout

Passeau Wins 12th as Cubs Beat Reds, 5-2

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, July 1.—The Chicago Cubs evened their two-game series with the Cincinnati Reds tonight by pecking out a 5 to 2 victory against the pitching of Johnny Vander Meer and Elmer Riddle.

Claude Passeau held the Reds to five hits in winning his twelfth game against five losses and finishing the fifteenth of 17 games he has started this year. Except for the first inning, when the Reds got their two runs on a single by Eddie Joost and successive doubles by Lonnie Frey and Max Marshall, the Cub hurler was rarely in trouble.

The Reds loaded the bases in the fifth on his three walks of the night, but he prevented them from making anything of it.

The Cubs quickly made it an off night for Vandy, combining a walk, Lou Novikoff's double, an intentional pass, a hit batter and a fly for two runs in the first.

Two more came in the third off two singles, a force play and Bill Nicholson's base-running. He stole second, went to third on Rollie Hemsley's low throw and then stole home. Sal Hernandez's double, a sacrifice and a fly produced the final marker in the seventh.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, July 1.—As was expected the baseball magnates were horror-struck at this week's twin proposals (1) that the World Series be taken on tour for Army-Navy relief and (2) that the 1943 season be curtailed two months with spring training out the window. They arose as a man to shout it down.

POVICH

Of all the straight-laced reactionaries, baseball clubowners are the champions, scared stiff lest the age-old pattern of their profitable business be disturbed by any new note. They fight off every move to color up their game and such innovations as night baseball were accepted only because the compelling power of the dollar sign finally pierced their hard-headedness. The annual mid-summer all-star game, now one of the high spots of the season, was undertaken only with great reluctance back in 1933 and with the specific condition then that there would be no more all-star games.

Jack Zeller, the general manager of the Tigers, who stunned the American League by his plan for pruning two months off the season's play next year and cutting out Spring training, probably won't get far with that idea. Anyway, it doesn't seem to have as much merit as the proposal to take the World Series on tour for war relief after the conclusion of the regular series. Much can be said in favor of the latter idea.

It didn't take much courage for Zeller to volunteer to cut two months off the season. His club is owned by Walter O. Briggs, the richest man in baseball, and the loss of profits would be no item with the Tigers. Zeller may simply have been Briggs' mouthpiece. Briggs, whose autobody plant is now holding millions of dollars worth of contracts for tanks, operates his baseball team only as a hobby and a toy anyway.

Other clubs couldn't make a go of it with the season two months shorter. They wouldn't have the revenue to pay their ball players, for one thing. With the season cut from six to four months, the players would have to take salary cuts that might drive them into the war industries or the armed service. That might not be a bad idea, of course. But the owners know it might be the end of baseball business.

There could be, however, no sane objection to making a road show of the World Series, however, after the regulation series of best four-out-of-seven is played between the two pennant winners. Baseball owes something for the green light it got from the White House last January and thus far it has repaid precious little.

The games the majors have been staging for war relief benefit have been flops so far, although they promise to produce more money with clubs such as Washington and the Yankees now turning over attractive Sunday double-header dates to the fund. But until the pressure was put on, baseball's contribution to the fund was pretty shabby.

Here in Boston, for instance, one little dog track near Revere Beach, Wonderland Park, has already contributed $50,000 for relief. In contrast only $45,000 was produced for war relief by five of the major league benefit games—those home games of the Red Sox, Phillies, Indians, Reds and Nats. Horse racing has already given a million to the fund and promises another million before the year is out.

Baseball is proud that it was cited by President Roosevelt as a morale factor essential in war time, and by taking their World Series from coast to coast the club owners could capitalize both on the morale value of their game and the money it would bring to war relief, which ought to overpower any objections to the proposal.

The World Series teams would be sure fire attractions in the cities off the beaten track of the Big Leagues—the Toledos, Minneapolises, Kansas Cities, New Orleans, and the big towns in Texas and up and down the Pacific Coast where big league baseball is only a legend. There'd bound to be a sell-out in every park.

The point has been made that there aren't enough big parks to hold the games but that's ridiculous. There are dozens of fields with 15,000 seating capacity, more or less, and that would be sufficient. One source which put the rap in on the idea said that a park seating 15,000 wouldn't enable the two clubs to clear enough to pay transportation and the players' salaries. That's nonsense.

Who's presuming, anyway, that the players would be paid for taking part in the World Series tour. They will have just received big cuts out of the regular World Series, approximately $6000 to each winning player and $4000 to each losing player, and that ought to hold 'em. They should be compelled to go on tour for nothing after getting that kind of dough and having the World Series glory they're supposed to prize so much.

Canadian Track Officials Called Off Wagering On Derby; Winner in Upset Is Maginot Line

By the Associated Press

Winnipeg, July 1.—Maginot Line, owned by L. H. Appleby of Vancouver, scored one of the biggest upsets in Canadian racing history today by winning the $5000 Canadian Derby at Polo Park.

Ten to Ace, owned by Harry Giddings of Oakville Ontario, finished last in the six-horse field.

Racing experts and track officials were so positive Ten to Ace would be the winner that they made the race a "no betting" affair. Even owners of rival horses said before the race they didn't think any horse could beat him.

For a time it seemed that the Ace, never beaten before by a Canadian-bred horse, would fulfill expectations. At the half-way mark in the 1¼-mile test he led by 20 lengths.

But he began to fade at the three-quarter mark and Maginot Line swept to victory. Fighting Finn, from the Winnipeg stable of J. M. Pitts, was second, and Panbroom, owned by L. R. Knifong of Austin, Tex., was third.

The winner's time was 2:13.

Shoulder Injury May Keep Dickey From All-Star Game

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 1.—Catcher Bill Dickey of the New York Yankees, who wrenched his left shoulder in yesterday's game with the Philadelphia Athletics, was unable to play against the A's tonight and there was some doubt about his condition for the All-Star game in New York next Monday.

Dickey had X-ray pictures made today but no report has yet been received on them.

Buddy Rosar, the Yanks' second-string catcher who also is on the American League All-Star team, has been ailing for several days and unable to run because of a lame leg.

Because of this Rookie Ed Kearse was behind the bat for the Yanks and may have to stay there through the important series coming up with the Boston Red Sox this week-end.

Birdie Tebbetts of Detroit is the third catcher on the American League All-Star squad. If either Dickey or Rosar are unable to play, substitutes will be named to give the team three receivers.

Coast Racing Official To Work Chicago Meet

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—Webb Everett, racing secretary at Santa Anita since that track's opening in 1934, has been named to the same position for the coming Washington Park meeting, Benjamin F. Lindheimer, chairman of Washington Park's board of directors, said today. The Washington meeting will open August 3.

Auker First A. L. Hurler to Win 10 Games

Browns Beat Tigers, 12-0, On 14 Hits

Submarine Hurler Allows Only Five Hits in Winning Twilight Game

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 1.—Elden Auker, veteran submarine ball specialist, became the first American League pitcher to win ten games when he blanked the Detroit Tigers on five hits in a twilight contest tonight while the St. Louis Browns were rapping out 14 for a 12-to-0 victory.

Auker permitted only one Tiger to reach third base as he beat Ernie Bonham of the New York Yankees and Jim Bagby of the Cleveland Indians, both of whom have won nine, to the tenth victory. Auker has lost six.

The Browns hammered Rookie Hal White for seven runs on eight hits before driving him out in the fifth, and another recruit, Hal Manders, was touched for six safeties including George McQuinn's eighth home run in the eighth with one aboard and Mike Chartaks sixth with the bases unoccupied in the ninth.

The Browns missed scoring only in the second frame, and all nine players participated in the batting assault. Glenn McQuillen, who had a triple, two doubles and a single, drove home what proved to be the winning run in the first.

100 Golfers to Start Virginia Event Today

Officials Surprised at Large Entry; Most Of State's Top-Notch Players Will Compete

By Barton Pattie

Associated Press Sports Writer

Hot Springs, Va., July 1.—Approximately 100 golfers, making their annual pilgrimage to this mountain resort for the thirty-second Virginia State Amateur Tournament despite the gas-tire shortage, will join in the title battle tomorrow with an 18-hole qualifying round launching the four-day event.

Tournament officials expressed surprise at the number of entries. They said they expected the transportation situation to cut the field much more than it did. There were 140 competitiors here a year ago.

The war did force vacating of the title, won last year by Walter Cushman of Charlottesville, now an ensign in the Navy and unable to be on hand. Another former titleholder, Jimmy Watts of Lynchburg, also is in the service and will be absent from the tourney for the first time in some years.

Otherwise, a check of the entry list shows that most of the State's top-ranking golfers will be on hand. Oldsters dominate the field, but a representative group of young stars is here.

These include Former Champion Sam Bates of Norfolk, Wynsol Spencer of Newport News, and George Payton, 18-year-old Newport News ace who bowed to Cushman, 2 and 1, in the finale last year.

This strong Tidewater trio—Bates, Spencer and Payton—were generally regarded as favorites on the eve of the tournament.

Spencer's Record Best

Spencer, a slender and consistent shotmaker, has probably the most impressive record of any of the entries. He made his debut in the State Amateur when a 17-year-old lad in 1937 and lost in the semifinals to Champion Dick Payne of Norfolk. Again in 1938, Spencer went to the semifinals before being eliminated by new Champion Jimmy Watts.

Spencer was invincible in State amateur ranks in 1939, winning the title at the Princess Anne Country Club at Virginia Beach. He yielded to Richmond's veteran Charlie Kent in the semifinals in 1940 and last year lost again in the semifinals to young Bates in a torrid battle.

The long picturesque Cascades course was a bit heavy today as some of the early arrivals sloshed around its sloping terrain and few noteworthy practice scores were recorded.

Hamilton Has 74

Jack Hamilton, youthful Newport News entry, stroked around the par 71 layout in 74; Spencer had a 77, and Payton breezed over nine holes in 34. Bates spent most of his time on the practice tee.

Richmond's Hermitage Country Club was represented by 25 members, including Club Champion Bill Tomlinson, jr., but two of the capital city's leading players, Don O'Brien and Charlie Kent, had not arrived tonight.

Fred Robinson, Harman Walker and H. B. Peterson—three well regarded Newport News players—are here. George Fulton, jr., Hampden-Sydney College golf captain, is Roanoke's one title threat.

D. C., Nearby Horses Enter Culpeper Show

Culpeper, Va., July 1.—Eighteen horses from Maryland and the District head the list of 300 entries for the Culpeper Horse Show, to be held here Saturday with a program of races winding up the day.

Those from the District include Lieut. and Mrs. Alvin I. Kay's most recent purchase, No Mistake, a handsome big 3-year-old who won the juvenile title at the Upperville Horse Show under Ernest L. Redmon's colors; Eddie Talbert's Good Friday, Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Bradley's Hy-Glo, Bobby Lee's Bonne Fille and William L. Gary's Tahra.

From Maryland will come Rigan McKinney's trio of Halethorpe, Apple of Blarney and Blaze Turpin; Jolea Farms' Rocksette, David Martin's Cateer and Joe Pohzehl's Randle's Way.

Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Randle will send their 7-foot leaper, Sport Marvel, along with Bootson, Troop, Randle's Time, Randle's Surprise, Kinlock and Gee Ray Bee. It probably will be the Randles' last opportunity to see their mounts in action for some time as Mr. Randle expects to join the United States Coast Guard shortly.

Two Ziegler Horses Win At Empire

By the Associated Press

Empire City Race Track, N. Y., July 1.—William Ziegler, jr., started two horses here today and both of them carried the familiar purple and red silks to victory. Shortly after the 2-year-old colt, Tweedy, had accounted for the fourth dash, Generous, a 10-to-1 shot, captured feature honors in the Miss Jemima (Class C) Handicap, a dash for fillies and mares. Generous is a half-sister to Tweedy, Matilda being the dam of both.

Generous, like Tweedy, was piloted by Venancio Nodarse. The filly scored by two lengths over Mrs. Andy Schuttinger's Fleetborough. W. C. Winfrey's Dini, back from an unsuccessful invasion of Delaware, finished third in the role of favorite, a neck farther behind. Generous covered the 5¾ furlongs in 1:08 2-5. Her triumph was witnessed by a crowd estimated at more than 12,000.

Dini, always a favorite at New York tracks, raced head and head with Generous for more than a quarter mile before finding the long shot more than her match. Generous gathered speed around the bend and easily held on to her daylight advantage through the stretch. Fleetborough, which beat Level Best in an overnight event at Belmont before finishing last to that filly in the top flight handicap, wore down Dini with a late rally today but was no match for Generous.

Elkridge Delaware Steeplechase Winner

Favorite Earns $6500 Purse by Victory In Indian River Event; Pays $3.90

By the Associated Press

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., July 1.—Leading from start to finish over the gruelling two-and-a-half miles of the stake course, Kent Miller's Elkridge was the winner here today of the $6000-Added Indian River Steeplechase Handicap, which was decided as the third and feature attraction of the eight-race card.

It was the first stake victory of the season for the 4-year-old son of Mate and Best By Test and his earnings were increased by $6500 when he reached home about three lengths in front of Rokeby Stable's Good Chance, which was the same distance to the fore of Caddie from the Montpelier Stable.

The form players had figured the race correctly and they received $3.90 for $2 while Elkridge's number stood on the infield board, despite the fact that a foul was claimed by the rider of the second horse, Willie Bland. The stewards listened to the complaints of the latter, but failed to take action.

A field of five good jumpers faced the barrier for the last of the Delaware Steeplechase and Race Association's jumping classics and two spills marred the endurance test. Boojum II bobbled at the fourth obstacle to lose Rider Jimmy Magee and Parma fell at the eighth fence. Boojum II raced riderless with the field and bothered Elkridge on several occasions. Boojum II was first home about two lengths in front of Elkridge.

Howard Cruz, a leading rider of flat races several years back, had the leg up on Elkridge and had his mount in front at every jump while driving over the long route in 4:54¼.

Md. Treasury Nets $525,227 From Racing

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., July 1.—Making its semiannual report to Governor O'Conor, the State Racing Commission today said it had turned $525,227 over to the Treasury, representing tax collections from the 33 spring racing days.

Secretary James F. Hayward wrote that the State averaged $15,915 a day in tax returns while mile tracks were operating at Bowie, Pimlico and Havre de Grace. Another sum of $36,000 was turned over to the Baltimore County treasurer as a special tax on Pimlico, Hayward reported.

The State netted $198,000 in taxes from the $6000 per diem tax for mile tracks and $325,907 from the 2 per cent levy on amounts bet during the season at the three ovals,

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Here's a 'Choke-Up Charley' Who Admits It

New York, July 1.—Jimmy Demaret, the pro golf star who plays the game as if it wer fun, said a remarkable thing when someone sympathized with him because he didn't win the Hale America tournament.

CONSIDINE

"I choked up," the good-looking fellow said, with a disarming grin. "Sure I did. I never could understand why golfers or any other kind of athlete, never will admit that they choke. All of them do at one time or another. Something happens inside them and they go to pieces. It's not always a lack of guts. It's mainly because their concentration has been upset."

Demaret came to the fifteenth hole of the final round of 1942's substitute for the United States Open needing only par figures for the last four holes. He had shot the previous five holes in 4-3-4-2-4. His duece was an eagle, for he miraculously sank a 140-yard mashie niblic shot to bring a roar from a crowd that wanted him to win. Now, as he stood on the tee of the fifteenth hole, a par five layout, he was 17 under par for the tournament. He was two shots ahead of the nearest man, Ben Hogan.

But there was a delay on the fifteenth. During the three or four minutes he had to wait to make his drive, dozens of fans and friends came up to him to shake hands and congratulate him.

"I was licked right then and there," he said later. "I said to myself, 'I'll play it safe from here in and be content with par golf.' I said it even though I've always argued that the thing to do when you have a lead is to hit the ball as hard as you can swing. But now when I had the tournament in my hand, I decided to play it safe. Consequently I got no pivot on my drive, when I finally hit it. I pushed the ball off into the rough, right behind a tree. Had to play the next shot lefthanded. Anyway, I finished 6-5-5-3 on four holes I had been easily playing in 4-4-4-3."

D. C. Lady Says a Word (Or Two) About Yanks

We have another fiery dispatch from our favorite baseball writer, Isabelle M. Parks of Washington, D. C. A careful survey of the Yankee roster fails to reveal Miss Parks' name, but to her the Yanks are "us" or "we," depending on the syntax, and the lady is currently waxing wroth over the assorted defis hurled at the champions by Del Baker, manager of the Tigers.

"Baker apparently thinks major league clubs are sufficiently on a par so that one team beats another decisively only when the latter team is scared to death. In support it is submitted that Detroit has beaten the Yankees six times while losing to them only four times. Highly creditable, but I should say it is slightly dangerous for Mr. Baker to dwell on those figures. He invites a further examination of Detroit records.

"Detroit has defeated Boston three times while losing seven games to them. Would you mind telling me what good it does Detroit to be unafraid of the Yankees and lick them 6 out of 10, and then fall flat on their faces in terror when confronted with the team holding down second place?

The Yanks Get Presents From No One

"I dispute very violently the claim that other teams concede games to the Yankees. It is impossible to get away from the fact that if you can't win the pennant itself, there is a thrill in beating the champion in individual games. Look at the way Auker pitches against the Yankees. Greenberg always hit like a fiend in New York. George McQuinn loves Yankee pitching. Bobby Doerr plays his best baseball against the Yankees. Dominic DiMaggio almost always outshines Joe when the two teams meet. As for Ted Williams, what he does to Yankee pitching is a crime.

"As for us, we're playing primarily to be in first place at the end of the season. McCarthy rotates his pitchers on the basis of how often they can pitch and whether or not they are in condition to pitch; he does not use them merely in an effort to build up a reputation against any one individual opponent.

"Baker is a pathetic sight this year, but my hard heart remains untouched. An old Detroft player once told me Cochrane worried his players to death. He didn't encourage them enough and he was too grouchy. And the same player told me Baker understood the players much better. He should see Baker this year. He remains on the bench and snaps and snarls at all and sundry. He not only bawls a player out once for a mistake in judgment, but carries on a running comment throughout the game. I suppose he sees the handwriting on the wall."

Galotta's Saran Captures Top Purse at Charles Town Oval

Buddy Root Rides Victor; Pays $3.60

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., July 1. Trainer Vernon Arthur pulled the one-two punch on the field in the Rosslyn Bowling Center Handicap here this afternoon and won the six and a half furlong test with Saran, owned by A. V. Galotta of Washington, D. C. The 4-year-old filly came home under Buddy Root's drive two lengths ahead of Mrs. M. E. (Liz) Whitney's Great Step. Four lengths farther back and in a photo for third position came Capt. Ewart Johnston's Royal Business. A field of eight competed.

Trainer Arthur had two horses in the race as an entry, G. D. McCleary's Spectator coupled with Saran. Spectator and Saran ran head and head in the early stages with Great Step. After the opening furlong, Spectator ran the legs off Great Step while Root rated Saran in third position. When Spectator tired and dropped out of it, Saran went up to collar Great Step and draw out gradually through the stretch while under vigorous handling.

est of the favorite players and paid a mere $3.60 mutuel. She was clocked in 1:21 over the fast track. A shower during the program did little more than lay the dust.

Gets $25 Bond

Galt Davis, owner of the Rosslyn Alleys, set a new precedent by presenting a $25 war bond to the groom of the winner, John Layton Williams, colored of 628 N Street Northwest, Washington, D. C. A favorite also won the James Sager Purse, the day's secondary feature. Mrs. D. Floyd's Grand Court, well handled by Jockey Al Bocson, proved the best of the field of seven going a mile and a sixteenth. Bocson took the filly to the top in the opening quarter, saved ground thereafter and finished with some daylight between her and Tellevane. Grouchy was third. The winner was a $4.60 choice and stepped the route in 1:48.

Bocson also had a hand in the daily double which paid $75.20. The Detroit boy rode Bill K. to victory in the second race. Sammy Palumbo won the third race by a nose with Happy Slave. State Witness was second in this thrilling finish.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al: Jockey Herb Claggett departed last night for New England to ride. One of the jockeys here was fishing on the Shenandoah River. A man walked up and asked. "Catching anything?" The jockey said, "They're biting pretty good." The man replied, "Sorry, but this is going to cost you $25." The man happened to be the game warden and the jockey lacked a fishing license. "I've been fined with reins in my hand, but, darned if this isn't the first time it ever cost me for having a fishing line in my hands," moaned the rider. By the way, if you are looking for a vacation spot you couldn't find a better one than Wageley's Cabins on the nearby river. Owner-Trainer Dan Chamblin reduced his stable by sending Not Sure, Exploration and Isabid to Leesburg (Va.) farm to be rested until fall. Jockey Patsy Grant left for his home in Scranton, Pa., for a rest. Trainer F. Lawrence is ill. Horses of the East View and Heloria Stables will be shipped to Aqueduct at the conclusion of the local meeting on Saturday. Walter Haight is entered today. He's in a tough spot. Alan Clarke is going to campaign him at Hagerstown, which accounts for him being in this section. C. H. Fitzgerald has purchased Apprentice Vincent Bracciale's contract from Dick Floyd. Bowes Bond is shipping his entire stable to Hagerstown for the opening on Tuesday. Jockey George Cardosea was suspended for the remainder of the meeting here last Monday. Dr. H. B. Langdon will campaign his horses at Hagerstown and will van them over from here when they have engagements. Ky Aldrich of the Redskins football team has been a visitor here this season and appears to be in better condition than ever. Only three more days of the Victory Meeting here. Come up and enjoy the races. At the same time you will be helping Army and Navy Relief and West Virginia charities. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—SHANTY BOAT has plenty of speed and seems much the best in day's opener. BEAR CAT belongs close with this kind. MISSY MARY is green but might surprise.

Second race—SCOOTIE may take the top on these and make every post a winning one. SATIN ROYCE is a threat with this kind. JOE SMOKY will be close if taken off the reserve list.

Third race—FALCONIERE has an edge on this field. Needs only the right ride. SUEGALE has closing ability and will be close. CLIFTONS DAWN is due respect.

Fourth race—SALFORD is a long-shot possibility that I'm going to put on top. WAR SMOKE has speed and will be threat. NOT ALONE to take care of the others.

Fifth race—SCARLET FLAME gets in this with light weight and I'm going to string along. MAN AT ARMS is in rare form and belongs close. EXARCH would take it all if sent postward.

Sixth race—TIME HER could be the right one. Gets an outside post position for a change. MANNY B is fit as hands make horses. AMPERAGE may be better than generally rated.

Seventh race—BUENO ORA seems suited here. I expect the speed horses to kill each other off. ALLEN CAID and BAR SHIP to fill out the money bracket.

Eighth race—CITY JUDGE is the natural choice in this field. PITTSBURGH wasn't shipped here for the ride. DANZIG is cheap but honest.

Ninth race—GIGGLE LEE has been rested and should beat this kind. BLENETHAL promises to be close. AUTOGO for the minor award.

Best bet—Shanty Boat.

Stolz and Wright Signed for Garden Bout

10-Rounder Is Scheduled For August 6

Promoter Expects To Match Hernandez And Costantino; 2 Other Bouts Set

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, July 1.—Mike Jacobs is in action again, and the waves are rolling on Jacobs Beach.

Which means there's going to be some of the "fresh" around for the fight mob. And that is very important to the boys and girls in the business.

For about a month now, there haven't been any fights in Madison Square Garden and no signs of any coming. This caused no end of inconvenience around and about, because no fights mean no "move-around money" in the neighborhood. And the beachcombers regard this situation as somewhat of a tragedy.

But Mike has taken command again and has lined up three fights on a summer schedule, with the prospect of more coming. Today he signed up the New York-recognized featherweight champ, Chalky Wright, and Allie Stolz, the curly-haired Newarker, for a ten-round nontitle tussle August 6. And he went to work on an affair between Charley Costantino and Pedro Hernandez, which the State Athletic Commission sanctioned as a featherweight elimination contest.

Robinson Fights

These topped off previously announced brawls between (A) Ray Robinson, the undefeated Harlem hammer, and Lightweight Boss Sammy Angott, for July 31, and (B) Tami Mauriello, the Bronx belter who held Bob Pastor to a draw recently, and Red Burman, the cement-chin from Baltimore, for July 23.

For several weeks Mike had been concentrating on a heavyweight title fight between Joe Louis and Bob Pastor for war relief, and had been paying virtually no attention to other possible cards.

Then Louis was shipped off to Fort Riley to learn how to be a soldier on horseback. So Mike dropped everything for a while and retired to his new estate at Rumson, N. J. "First time in 40 years I took a June vacation," he told the boys.

Winner Meets Savold

But Uncle Mike isn't built for sitting still for long and a few days ago he got the "itch" again. So he started the telephone wires smoking and immediately the gentle art of mashing noses got a shot in the arm.

As an outcome of the Mauriello-Burman bout, the winner probably will meet Lee Savold later in the summer. After Angott and Stolz get through with Robinson and Wright, respectively, they'll probably put on their awaited lightweight title return match.

What's more, Uncle Mike hasn't given up hope of the fight everyone wants to see—between the soldier boys, Louis and Billy Conn. He's rooting for the Army to unbend and let this one loose for September.

Reese, the Celebrated Bunter, Misses This One, Then Fans

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Dodger Shortstop Pee Wee Reese, noted for his bunts, missed this one in the ninth inning of a game with the Boston Braves and then struck out with Pete Reiser on first base. In the tenth inning of last Friday's game with Cincinnati, Reese squeezed home the winning run with a bunt, despite the fact that there were two strikes on him. Behind Reese are Boston's Catcher Ernie Lombardi and Umpire "Beans" Reardon. Boston won, 4-3 muffed a big inning because Spence hit into a double play after Case drew a walk.

The run the Red Sox scored to tie the score at 1-1 in the fourth was not exactly untainted. Clary made a good stop on Pesky's grounder but pulled Vernon off the bag with a wide throw, and it was scored as a single. Williams and Doerr rapped out singles to score him.

Stan Spence popped up with the bases full in the fifth to help Ken Chase out of a hole, but in the sixth the Nats got a run to go in front, 2-1. Cullenbine singled and Estalella walked. Chase knocked down Evans' line drive and held it to a single that merely filled the bases. Sullivan flied out to score Cullenbine and Clary walked to refill the bases with two out, but Newsom hit into a force play.

Thereafter the Nats couldn't get to first base—literally, not figuratively—against Yank Terry, who relieved Chase at the start of the seventh. Terry set them down in order in the last three innings.

The Red Sox meanwhile tied the score at 2-2 in the sixth when Finney led off with a double to left on which Cullenbine tried to make a shoestring catch. He could have played it safe. Newsom wild-pitched Finney to third with none out, and walked Williams. But he fanned Doerr in this crisis, only to see Lupien single to left for the tying run. Newsom limited the damage to one run by fanning Pinchhitter Cronin with the bases full.

And then in the seventh, the Red Sox won the ball game. DiMaggio led off with a single to right, was sacrificed to second and scored on Finney's single to center. It was Newsom's twelfth defeat of the year and one of his better-pitched games.

Pvt. Gomez Quits Ring for Duration To Teach Soldiers

By the Associated Press

Camp Blanding, Fla., July 1.—His ring career at high tide because of a recent decision over Sailor Tommy Tucker, Pvt. Tommy Gomez hung up his gloves today "until we get the big fight finished."

By retiring for the duration Gomez, 21, passed up several good bouts which had been offered him after his victory over Tucker, eighth ranking light-heavyweight. Plans already were underway in Jacksonville to match him again with Tucker.

The former Tampa bellhop has fought more than three-fourths of his 43 professional bouts since he entered the Army.

No polished boxer, Gomez is rated a terrific puncher. He has scored 33 knockouts and lost only two engagements.

He will continue to go through light workouts and to instruct other soldier-fighters.

Anglers Throng Opening Of Virginia Season

Winchester, Va., July 1.—Their activities curtailed somewhat by the lack of gasoline and automobile tires, scores of anglers in Winchester and Frederick County today took to the Shenandoah River and other nearby streams on the first day of the bass season.

The streams were in reasonably good condition despite heavy rains last week and early this week which sent the streams to a higher level than usual. Fewer licenses have been sold this year than last.

Air Field Has Gridmen but They Go Away

Tyndall Field, Panama City, Fla., July 1.—A lot of good football material at the Army Air Forces Gunnery School here is going to waste this fall because it won't have a football team.

The transient character of the field personnel; here a few weeks learning gunnery and then shipment to various destinations eliminates gridiron activities, officials have ruled.

Among the football notables here is First Lieut. Herman Gundlach, captain of the Harvard team of 1934-35. He is in charge of Negro troops and trucks and is responsible for the prompt transportation of men and materials military in and out of the post.

Lieutenant Gundlach, a former reserve officer was in the contracting business in Atlanta, Ga., when called into active service. Prior to that, he had been associated with the Sinclair Refining Co. there.

When he wound up his college career, the lieutenant played with an All-Star team that took on the Chicago Bears. Then, he tried professional football for a time with the Boston Redskins, now the famed Washington Redskins.

Leone Pins Plummer in Mat Feature

By Oscar Elder

Mad Michele Leone, the Splattin' Latin, made an auspicious debut as a wrestling headliner last night when he defeated Coast Guardsman Lou Plummer before approximately 1000 customers in the feature match at Turner's Arena. Leone required a body press and a wonderful repertoire of nasty mannerisms to accomplish the feat in 16 minutes, and within this relatively short time the fans took him to their hearts as a villain whom they can hate enthusiastically.

Leone started rough, with gouging, pulling hair, illegal use of knees, etc., and finished the battle in much the same style. Referee Casey Berger was forced to separate the pair repeatedly, and became quite piqued at the Italian on one or two occasions when Leone would not heed instructions.

The sailor, who has been something of a hard rock himself in past performances, seemed strangely lethargic last night and permitted the victor to remain on the offensive throughout most of the match. Once Plummer showed signs of his old fire when he put a headlock on Leone and then popped the swarthy fellow twice on the beak. This appeared to hurt the Italian's feelings, as well as his nose, for he made an impassioned plea to the arbiter and the crowd to stop Lou from using copyrighted tactics.

Steal Show

Finally, after 16 minutes, Leone got Plummer on the mat with a body press and pinned his shoulders to end the bout.

With all respect to the main affair, Fred Grobmier and Jim Austeri stole the show in their supporting battle, which was won by Grobmier in 15 minutes. This soiree was violent all the way, and took in considerably more space than the ring. Each of the mechanics was heaved into the audience upon at least one occasion, and the fans even attacked Austeri when he lost his restraint and bashed Grobby on the nose, drawing blood.

After 15 minutes, Grobmier jumped on the squatty Austeri, piggy-back, and floored him to apply a figure-four scissors hold. Austeri was helpless and the referee halted the bout.

In the semifinal, Tommy O'Toole, of the Coast Guard, took an unexpectedly quick decision over Milo Steinborn in 4 minutes. Steinborn had just heaved O'Toole outside the ropes and then pulled him back in again when the arbiter ordered them to break. In doing so, O'Toole's legs became entangled on the ropes and he lost his balance and floored Milo and then jumped aboard with a body press.

The advertised grudge match between Hank Kulkovich and Maurice La Chappelle developed into a hateless, but very pleasing scientific show, which ended in a draw.

Lee Ritter Aces 8th Hole At Manor Club

Lee Ritter, one of Manor Club's consistent middle-70 shooters, made the best shot of his golfing career yesterday, a five-iron which hit 1 foot from the cup on the eighth green and jumped in for his first hole in one.

The par 3 measures 151 yards.

Ritter was playing with Walter McCreery and Jack Allen in a five-some against Hary G. Pitt and Ralph Gibson, and Ritter's ace helped his team to a best ball 65, 5 under par, which was too much for the Pitt-Gibson duo.

The hole in one was the first eagle posted on the Peter Dawson ringer score card at the Manor Club. The ringer tournament is a Nation-wide affair, run between July 1 and September 7.

Claggett Stevens Shoots 67 at Manor

Manor Club Professional Clagett Stevens set a personal scoring record since taking over the Norbeck club pro job, when he romped around in 67 strokes, 3 under par.

Stevens played the woods nine in 33, 2 under par, and was back in 34 on the outside. He holed every putt while playing with M. B. Canby, P. W. Calfe and Charles Cullen.

Stevens followed with an even par 70 yesterday in a round with Dick Meyer, the G. U. golfer, and Charles Cullen, a local scholastic linksman. Cullen, a well built youngster, has the Manor members talking about his ponderous tee shots. The Devitt prep team member has been clouting drives near the 300-yard markers consistently.

Black Bass Season Opens In Maryland

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., July 1.—Scores of anglers greeted opening of the season on black bass in the nontidal waters of Maryland today from boats and river banks. The Potomac, clear and full, supported the largest number of fishermen, who reported spotty luck.

Best catch displayed in Frederick was that of Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Harper of this city, who creeled eight bass and five catfish. The largest bass tipped the scales at 3¾ pounds. The couple landed the fish at Point of Rocks on live minnows. Most catches were limited to one to five per angler. One arrest was made locally. G. Howard Gillelan, Baltimore, was fined $25 for having in his possession a bass under the 10-inch legal size.

Rivermen said the Monocacy River, fine bass stream, will not be clear enough for fishing before Saturday.

Hagerstown Sportsmen Improve Trout Streams

Hagerstown, Md., July 1 (AP).—Sportsmen and farmers from the Indian Springs section of Washington County have been working for the past month on stream improvement for trout in Lanes Run.

Sunburn Lotion Urged For Pigs

The telegraph news wires carried these briefs yesterday:

Sunburn lotion for white pigs is the latest barnyard wrinkle recommended by Michigan State College's animal husbandry department in East Lansing.

"It seems that white pigs suffer from sunburn in pasture during the summer," the department bulletin says, suggesting use of a "perfumeless" lotion composed of equal parts of lime water and raw linseed oil.

The third letter of a four-letter word will decide the fate of Eng Lang, Chinese restaurateur in New York.

Summoned to court on a charge of having 10 pounds of rancid fat in his establishment, Eng nearly got fined after a health department inspector said Eng told him he was using the fat for soup.

But Eng spoke up and claimed he didn't say "soup," but "soap," and the court adjourned the hearing until Tuesday to determine whether the fact in the case involved the letter "u" or "a."

A cheery postal card was received in Kansas City yesterday from John Blanchon, saloonkeeper who was visiting in Paris, France.

It would have been delivered as addressed, to Police Chief Wentworth E. Griffin—except that Chief Griffin died 14 years ago. And, for that matter, Blanchon himself died even earlier, police said.

The card, marked "Rush!" was mailed in Paris, August 18, 1911.

Houston Crewmen Probably Seized, Navy Agrees

By International News Service

A Navy spokesman yesterday described as probably true Japanese radio reports that survivors from the American cruiser Houston and Australian cruiser Perth are safe in an internment camp.

The Japanese-controlled Batavia radio declared that Nipponese sailors from a destroyer had picked up some of the survivors from the Houston, lost in the Java Sea on February 28. The broadcaster went on to praise the gallant fight put up by the Houston.

No information was given as to how many survivors had been picked up, but it was said that 1000, mostly Americans and Australians, are in the camp.

"While all Americans will understand that broadcasts originating from enemy sources can not be regarded as authentic, there appears to be no reason for the issuance of false information on this subject by the Japanese," the Navy Department spokesman told newsmen.

The Houston and Perth were last heard from directly by the Navy during the battle of the Java Sea that preceded Japan's invasion of the Dutch East Indies island. The Houston's last report was that she had been intercepted by a large enemy naval force.

Requisition Bill Passes House Unit

Overruling the strenuous opposition of local civic groups, a House District Subcommittee yesterday approved an amendment to the District blackout law giving the Commissioners plenipotentiary powers over private property in the city.

Chairman Hunter (Democrat) of Ohio said that he would seek a special meeting of the full committee to consider the subcommittee's recommendation this week and would try to place the bill before the House for action on Monday.

A War Department amendment, the exact provisions of which were undisclosed, involving military operations in the District is to be offered in the Senate if the bill passes the House.

Harry Wender, executive vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Mrs. Leslie B. Wright, chairman of the Northwest Citizens Council, opposed the broad grant of authority to the Commissioners at the hearing yesterday.

The measure now authorizes them to make whatever rules and regulations they feel are necessary for civilian defense here, and specifically authorizes them to requisition private property of all kinds if they believe it is necessary.

Other provisions allow them to borrow another million dollars from the United States Treasury for the financing of defense activities, and exempt the District from liability in accidents involving defense personnel or organizations.

Both Wender and Mrs. Wright told the subcommittee that the powers were too sweeping. Wender asserting that they should at least be limited to the particular powers mentioned in the measure. Mrs. Wright declared that some of the powers would necessarily have to be delegated, with a resulting possibility of misuse of the authority by subordinates.

Testifying in favor of the bill were Col. Earl S. Patterson of the War Department, Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, Commissioner Guy Mason and Col. Lemuel Bolles, District civilian defense director.

Bolles assured the committee that all areas of the city would be properly equipped for defense activities, after Wender had suggested an amendment specifically directing the Commissioners to use part of the new funds to equip defense posts.

Gasoline Stocks In Week Decline 1,236,000 Barrels

New York, July 1 (AP).—United States gasoline stocks were reported today by the American Petroleum Institute to have dropped 1,236,000 barrels in the week ended June 27 to a total of 88,611,000, compared with 90,414,000 barrels a year earlier.

There also was a sharp decline in heavy fuel oil supplies to 77,304,000 barrels, down 1,014,000, while gas oil and distillate (light) fuels increased 607,000 barrels to a total of 32,851,000.

Crude oil production for the week averaged 3,719,450 barrels daily, slightly less than the previous week's average and compared with 3,847,250 barrels daily in the corresponding 1941 week.

Refinery operations were at 76.5 per cent of capacity against 73.3 the week before, indicating a crude run of 3,581,000 barrels against 3,434,000. A year ago the daily average was 3,949,000 barrels.

Gasoline production rose to 10,713,000 barrels from 9,927,000 the previous week.

Corporate Credit Needs Expand

New York, July 1, (AP)—Greater demand for bank credit to cover cash requirements of corporations was indicated today in a survey announced by the National Industrial Conference Board.

The Board found that higher taxes, together with larger inventories and receivables had created borrowing problems for one-fourth of a representative group of companies questioned.

Other concerns, the board added, indicated that they probably would be obliged to borrow to meet the greater tax load in prospect for this year.

This situation is regarded also as having important postwar implications, the Board's summary said, as it may cause some corporations to seek long-term funds.

Treasury Aide Recognizes Need for Granting Tax Relief for Debt-Encumbered Individuals

In a memorandum to Congress, the Treasury Department recently acknowledged the need for granting income tax relief for persons with heavy private debts.

Randolph E. Paul, tax advisor of the Treasury, declared the problem "could be dealt with from a wider point of view by some sort of more or less general moratorium on debt payments, at least for home owners." Others suggestions from Mr. Paul were (1) special income tax credits for War Bond purchases or debt payments; (2) a system of postponing for four years part of the income tax for persons who use a large percentage of their income for debt payments or saving, and (3) a "special spending" tax which would be an extra income tax based on the percentage of income a person spends.

His memorandum added that "many individuals are finding it difficult, if not impossible, to continue amortizing the mortgages on their homes, or to maintain premium payments on life insurance and endowment contracts, or perhaps even payments on installment purchases of automobiles, refrigerators, etc.

"The hardships resulting from the imposition of heavy income taxes on persons with commitments to repay debts present a difficult problem. The solutions which readily come to mind are open to serious objections. However, the importance of the problem is such that even an inadequate and defective treatment may be better than none."

The income tax debt relief problem was presented in another form by Robert V. Fleming, president and chairman of the board of the Riggs National Bank, Washington.

"I know of many cases of both individuals and corporations in need," said Mr. Fleming, "who were encouraged to go into debt during the period when we were trying to pull ourselves up by our bootstraps to stimulate business activity and who, under the present tax rates, will have great difficulty in liquidating their contractual obligations."

Relief should be given to those taxpayers, individual and corporate, holding sizable sums of preferred stock or capital debentures in their capital structure, said Mr. Fleming, adding:

"There is no question as to the difference in the economic status of an individual or corporation in debt as contrasted with those not in debt, particularly as respects their ability to pay these high taxes, which must be assessed in order to help carry on the war effort."

Other Washington bankers and businessmen feel the same way as Mr. Fleming. A special memorandum on the problem was prepared for The Post and can be stated as follows:

In the first place individuals in debt have been unfairly treated by our tax laws because of their retroactive character and because of the rapidity and magnitude of the tax increases.

For example, the Revenue Act of 1940 became law on June 25, 1940, but was effective from January 1, 1940. The Revenue Act of 1941 did not become law until September 25, 1941, but was effective from January 1, 1941, and the probabilities are that the pending Revenue Bill of 1942 will not be enacted into law until September of this year. Thus, revenue acts have been from six to nine months retroactive and when a man borrows money in the first part of the year he does not know how much tax he will have to pay on the income upon which he may depend to pay the debt. Moreover, the recent tax increases have been sudden and drastic. This is readily proved by the following example which shows the tax on a married man with no dependents and with a net income of $10,000 for a service of years, together with the percentage increase in tax:

Total Federal Income Tax on Married Man With $10,000 of Net Income.

Year.	Total tax.	Increase Percentage Over 1939.
1940	528.00	27%
1941	1,305.00	214
1942 (Treasury proposal)	2,549.00	514

It seems obvious that under such a situation the individual will often be in grave difficulties in meeting his obligations, especially in cases where those obligations were created before there was any intimation of the extreme tax increases which have recently occurred.

In the second place, it is believed that the ability to pay of a man in debt is substantially less than the ability to pay of a man with the same income who is not in debt. This is because the man in debt must amortize the principal of that debt and no reduction is made in his net income on account of such debt payments. This is true whether he is on a salary and buying a home, or whether he is conducting an unincorporated business enterprise.

If some relief is not given to the individual in debt, doubtless many will be unable to meet their taxes, so the Government will not secure its expected immediate revenue, and will lose revenue in future years because a taxpayer has been put out of business.

TOMORROW—Consensus on the need for income tax debt relief and suggested methods.

Montgomery Ward Files $1,000,000 Libel Suit

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—Montgomery Ward & Co., mail order and retail merchandise firm, today announced it had filed a $1,000,000 damage suit against the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., Inc., New York, in the United States District Court here.

The suit charges that Business Week, a McGraw-Hill publication, in its May 23 issue printed an article that was "false," libelous, malicious and defamatory" to Montgomery Ward.

In Albany, N. Y., Joseph Gerardi of New York City, secretary of the McGraw-Hill Co., said there would be no comment from company officials pending a study of the charges.

Columbia Gas Deal Approved By U. S. Court

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 1.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today approved the exchange of 400,000 shares of Columbia Oil & Gasoline Co. preferred stock for five subsidiaries of the oil company, an arrangement set up by the Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation to meet the terms of a Government anti-trust suit.

Judge Albert B. Maris sustained the finding of Judge John P. Nields in the Wilmington Federal District Court, asserting the plan seemed to be fair.

The appeal was taken by David Young 3d, of New York, a common stockholder of the gas corporation, who sought an injunction to prevent the exchange, contending it was "detrimental" to the investors.

In the development of Young's suit, special masters esitmated the value of the 400,000 shares at $9,482,000 and the subsidiaries at 10 million dollars as of June, 1939. This difference in dollars and cents, Judge Maris said in his opinion, "may be more than compensated by the right it (Columbia gas) will acquire to conduct its business as a public utility holding company within the law unhampered by Government prosecution."

The general plan is part of a "consent decree" in the Government's 6-year-old suit to break the holding company's control over the Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co.

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, July 1.—A new issue of 35 million dollar Celanese Corp. of America 3½ per cent debentures was offered today at 99½ by a syndicate headed by Dillon, Read & Co.

Proceeds will be used to retire outstanding debentures, pay off three million dollars serial bank loans and add to working capital.

The corporation has carried out during recent years an extensive plant expansion program. During the five-year period, 1937-1941, expenditures of the corporation and its wholly owned subsidiaries for plant additions, machinery, equipment and improvements were approximately $32,500,000.

Other members of the underwriting group include: Alex. Brown & Sons; Hemphill, Noyes & Co.; Hornblower & Weeks; Kidder, Peabody & Co.; W. C. Langley & Co.; Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane; E. H. Rollins & Sons, Inc.; Smith, Barney & Co.

Chocolate Bars May Vanish From Market in 1943

New York, July 1 (AP).—The chocolate candy bar—an American institution comparable to the hot dog—may be as difficult to obtain as a rubber tire after this year.

"There probably will be plenty of chocolate bars available until the end of 1942," an official of the Association of Manufacturers of Confectionery and Chocolate said today.

"Early in 1943, however, supplies will begin to get tight," he added, "and by Easter of next year production virtually may halt—unless imports of cocoa are increased."

Difficulties in the industry are traceable to the cocoa bean, essential raw product necessary for the manufacture of chocolate, imported chiefly from the African Gold Coast, South America, Mexico and the West Indies.

Shipping problems created by global war have limited imports of the bean to such an extent that the industry has eaten heavily into its warehouse stocks.

Stocks Slip Slightly in Light Trade As Tension Rises Over Fate of Egypt

New York, July 1.—Rising tension over the fate of Egypt was blamed for a moderate setback in stock market prices today. As had been the case since Britain's position in the Near East became serious, the reports of fresh Axis gains occasioned no important increase in selling. But brokers said the news worked against the market in keeping inactive at least a part of the investment money that usually looks for employment in securities at this time of year.

Most speculative leaders finished a little lower, and a few were down 1 to 2 or more points. Exceptions included American Telephone up 1¼, and Allied Chemical, up 2½.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite recorded a dip of .1 of a point at 35.2. Dealings at 206,680 shares were the smallest for a five-hour session this year.

A drop of 2½ points in American Can was charged up to an overnight announcement of a reduction in the dividend to 75 cents a share from the $1 quarterly payments the company had made since 1929.

Eastman Kodak fell 2¾ and Owens-Illinois 1⅜. Stocks off fractions included Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Goodrich, Goodyear, Woolworth, United Aircraft, Westinghouse, General Electric, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Standard Oil (N. J.) and Texas Co., Montgomery Ward and U. S. Steel were a shade ahead.

Bonds were without a definite trend and commodities also were irregular with fairly wide swings in grains and cotton. Chicago wheat closed 1 to 1¾ cents a bushel higher and corn rose 1⅛ to 1½. Hogs were 10 to 15 cents down. Cotton futures gave up early advances of $1 a bale to end 10 to 30 cents a bale off.

Aluminum Co. of America retreated 2½ points in the curb while American Cyanamid, N. J. Zinc, American Light & Traction and St. Regis Paper registered fractional losses. Creole Petroleum and Glenn Alden Coal had small gains. Transactions here were 39,890 shares against 39,740 yesterday.

Construction Sets New Peak In Six Months

New York, July 1.—The tremendous increase in construction projects incident to full-scale war was emphasized today with the announcement by Engineering News-Record that the total volume of construction in the first six months of 1942 surpassed all previous annual volumes except in 1941. Even in that year of defense preparation the volume did not reach the current half-year total until nine months had elapsed.

The volume in the first half of 1942 and in 1941 was (000s omitted):

	1942	1941
Total construction	$4,905,294	$2,841,403
Private construction	341,408	734,418
Public construction	4,563,886	2,106,985

Of the total public work included in the figures, the Federal Government sponsored $4,234,920,000 against only $328,966,000 for States and municipalities. Erection of public buildings accounted for almost two-thirds of the public construction, the amount expended on such work reaching $3,197,373,000.

Geographical distribution of total construction was as follows (000s omitted):

	1942	1941
New England	$ 205,948	$ 164,385
Middle Atlantic	687,996	647,070
South	1,057,242	611,823

Dividend Reduced By American Can

New York, July 1 (AP). — The American Can Co. has declared a dividend of 75 cents a share on the common stock, a reduction of 25 cents from the previous quarterly rate. Payment will be made August 15 to stock of record July 23.

The company said the reduction was due to the effect of the steel situation on its volume and uncertainty as to future tax requirements.

War Shipments Of 432 Plants Increase 46%

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 1.—The automotive branch of the War Production Board disclosed today that war shipments from 432 plants of 157 companies of the automotive industry were 46 per cent greater in April than in February.

The companies surveyed included eight large automobile manufacturers, nine truck companies and 140 parts makers. They make up 72 per cent of the automotive industry, based on labor.

The companies reported April shipments of $420,000,000 of which $349,000,000 were war goods. February war shipments were $239,000,000.

The report estimates that if figures for the entire industry were available, the April shipments of war goods would be shown as at an annual rate of more than $5,600,000,000. Of the total of April war shipments, it discloses, $186,000,000 came from the eight automobile manufacturing companies, against $113,000,000 in February. The comapnies surveyed were General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, Studebaker, Hudson, Packard, Nash and Graham-Paige, operating 182 plants.

The 432 plants were reported as employing 561,480 persons in April, of whom 413,656 were production workers. April man hours on war work were placed at 75,000,000 compared with 39,000,000 in February. It has been estimated that when the plants covered in the survey reach their maximum war production the total man hours will be 1,350,000,000 a year.

Ernest Kanzler, chief of the WPB automotive branch, pointed out that in the early stages of mass production, while tooling operations still are in progress "the relation of man hours to shipments is very high, as compared to results when the production system gets rolling properly."

Citizens Seek County Charter In Montgomery

About 100 representative citizens of Montgomery County met Tuesday night at the Bethesda Woman's Club in Bethesda to form the Montgomery County Charter Committee, elect officers and directors and adopt the constitution of an organization which will work toward the framing of a charter of county government for submission to the vote of the people.

The immediate objective, it was brought out at the meeting, is to circulate petitions and elect a charter board next November in accord with the provisions of the Maryland constitution. Formation of the committee, which is expected eventually to enroll thousands of Montgomery County voters, is the outgrowth of a movement for more efficient and economical government that has been under way for some time.

Allen H. Gardner of Silver Spring was elected president; Clarence B. Hurrey of Sandy Spring and Mrs. Vestus J. Willcox of Laytonsville, vice presidents; Mrs. Maybelle G. Fickel of Silver Spring, secretary, and Capt. Charles E. Parsons, Chevy Chase, treasurer.

To Employ Director

Immediately following the organization meeting, the newly elected board of directors met and voted to employ Mrs. John H. Werner of Bethesda as executive director, to be in charge of an office to be opened in Bethesda. Mrs. Werner, well known throughout the county, will devote much of her time to the work of the charter committee.

The following statement was issued at the close of the meeting:

"We believe that a free people should assume the obligations of democracy wherever they find them; that one of those obligations is the duty to take an active interest in, and to serve, their local government without thought of material reward or political spoils; that the government of Montgomery County is no exception to the general rule that governments can be made more efficient and economical; and that increased efficiency and economy will promote the best interests of the county and aid in the national defense and war effort.

"Believing these things, we have sponsored the organization of the Montgomery County charter committee to work for the election of a nonpartisan charter board and the drafting of a charter of government for submission to the vote of the people; and we urge all voters in the county, irrespective of party allegiance, to become members of the charter committee and to give its program their active and fearless support."

Several speakers stressed the nonpartisan nature of the movement. Registered Democrats and Republicans alike were present.

In general the constitution of the new organization follows the pattern of the city charter committee of Cincinnati.

Directors Elected

The following were elected members of the board of directors: The Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, Westmoreland Hills; Dr. Louis D. Bliss, Takoma Park; Donald L. Chamberlin, Kenwood; Mrs. Dean Dinwoodey, Chevy Chase; J. H. Forsyth, Silver Spring; George E. Hamilton, sr., Bethesda; Mrs. Minier Hostetler, Travilah; Stephen James, Silver Spring; Frederic P. Lee, Bethesda; Rev. J. Virgil Lilly, Rockville; Adlai S. Magee, Bethesda; Irving LeRoy McCathran, Washington Grove; Robert A. Miller, jr., Spencerville; Mrs. PGad B. Morehouse, Silver Spring; Mrs. Walter E. Perry, Bethesda; Ray Tucker, Chevy Chase; Col. C. F. von dem Bussche, Barnesville; Capt. Chester Wells, Chevy Chase.

Chairmen of committees are: Committee on education and publicity, Marquis W. Childs, Chevy Chase; legal committee, James Cunningham Rogers, Chevy Chase; field division, Roy C. Corderman, Bethesda; executive committee of the speakers' bureau, Mrs. James V. Bennett, Chevy Chase; committee on finance, James A. Cosgrove, Chevy Chase.

Contract Bridge

"This hand was played at a duplicate at the Brooklyn Bridge Club; Mrs. Phylis Gardner was my partner," writes S. B. "South opened with a heart and arrived at a four-heart, doubled, contract. The cards:

	♠ K 8 7 5 ♡ K 8 ◇ A J 7 4 2 ♣ K 4
♠ A J 10 3 2 ♡ 3 ◇ K Q 9 5 ♣ 10 8 5	(NORTH) WEST EAST (SOUTH)	♠ Q 9 6 4 ♡ Q 7 6 5 4 ◇ 8 6 ♣ J 2
	♠ none ♡ A J 10 9 2 ◇ 10 3 ♣ A Q 9 7 6

"Is it not a big temptation to trump an opening lead of the ace of spades, with the spade king in dummy on which a losing diamond can be discarded?" writes the contributor. "But if you do, you lose the timing of the hand. With a discard of a diamond on the spade ace, you win the second lead, pull three rounds of trumps finessing East and leaving him with queen small; then, by playing clubs until East trumps, all the opponents can make are the ace of spades and two trumps.

"If you trump the first lead the hand is licked; East always remains one trump stronger than declarer.

"Of course five clubs is a lay down, but a match-point duplicate, North-South naturally tries for 420 points rather than 400 points."

If South trumps the ace of spades as many declarers not so far-sighted as Mrs. Gardner would do, this shortening of declarer's trumps, together with the bad trump break, will defeat the contract.

Declarer can take two rounds of trumps, finessing East for the queen on the second, but East will remain with the queen, twice-guarded while declarer has only the ace and one. This means that when East ruffs the third round of clubs, South will have to use up a trump to get back to his hand as East will naturally throw him on the board with a spade. South of course, will obtain a diamond discard on the king of spades but to get back to lead clubs again he will have to ruff. This will cut him down to the heart ace while East will have queen and one, and on the exchange of ruffs, declarer playing clubs and East spades, East will gain control and win two hearts and a spade or diamond trick, making in all three trumps and one side trick for down one.

Grin and Bear It

"We've been married a month now and Edwin hasn't started to read the paper at breakfast—will I have to go on all my life combing my hair and putting on makeup every morning?"

with Glynn

Norman Corwin, the brilliant young C. B. S. dramatist, has arrived in London to write and direct a series of seven Monday evening broadcasts, starting July 27, to tell the United States how the British citizenry is doing under wartime conditions. The broadcasts will be heard over WJSV at 10 p. m.

Word of Corwin's arrival was received in New York from Columbia Broadcasting System's London office, where C. B. S. sent Corwin to do the series in collaboration with the British Broadcasting Co.

Edward R. Murrow, chief of Columbia's European staff, made the original proposal for the series when he was in this country a few weeks ago on vacation. Murrow is to direct the series and also act as narrator.

Plans for the broadcasts were developed by C. B. S. in collaboration with the New York and London offices of the B. B. C. Responsible for arranging many of the details is Lindsay Wellington, chief of the B. B. C. in New York City. Wellington recently left for London to make the necessary arrangements there.

Corwin is to be assisted in the productions at various times by Lawrence Gilliam and Val Gielgud, two of B. B. C.'s outstanding radio program men, and by the B. B. C. music department headed by Arthur Bliss.

Attorneys Clash Over Dictaphone Angle in Eklund 'Sniper-Slaying' Trial

A heated verbal battle between opposing attorneys ended yesterday's session of the District Court trial of John Eugene Eklund, accused as the "sniper" slayer of Hyland McClaine, 17-year-old Negro, October 15, 1940.

The flare-up was set off when Defense Attorney Harry T. Whelan rose to object to testimony by Capt. Robert J. Barrett, assistant chief of detectives, Metropolitan Police. The detective had been relating circumstances of a search for bullets at a Hot Shoppe in Virginia.

Whelan's protest included a reference to methods used by police in obtaining information from Eklund. At this point, Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray interjected a warning that "if there are to be repeated references of this kind, we will break the evidence wide open and introduce the whole matter—which Mr. Whelan doesn't want in the case."

The reference was to a dictaphone said to have been used to overhear a conversation between Eklund and the attorney who defended him during his first trial.

Justice James W. Morris quieted the excited attorneys and excluded the jury from the room in order to thresh out the controversy.

Whelan contended that Barrett's testimony would involve intimation of information obtained through the dictaphone. To this Murray replied that the prosecution had consented to omit testimony on the dictaphone records, but stated he would not tolerate mere mention of it in open court.

"Mr. Whelan wants to mention the dictaphone," Murray said, "but wants to stop there, merely to inform the jury of the method used. If he chooses to put his foot in the doorway, we will open the door wide."

Whelan countered with:

"There is no law in the land that will allow the introduction into evidence of a dictaphone conversation between a defendant and his lawyer."

Justice Morris said he would allow the Jury to hear Barrett's testimony without mention of the dictaphone, and then adjourned court until 10 a. m. this morning.

Among today's witnesses will be a ballistics expert several police officers, and Marvin Richard Harlow, a prisoner whom Eklund befriended over several chess games in jail. The Government claims that Eklund disclosed to Harlow a spot in a Baltimore park where he had hidden a pistol. Police later found the gun there.

Testifying yesterday were Mildred Washington Simms, who was with McClaine near the K Street Viaduct when the youth was shot from behind; Charles M. Rahe, a cab driver; Arthur L. Weatherford and Warren W. Dietrich, both friends of Eklund, and Captain Barrett.

Mrs. Simms, a bride of two days, stepped down from the stand early yesterday and placed her hand on Eklund's shoulder signifying her identification of him as the man she saw with a gun immediately following the shooting of McClaine.

Weatherford, who was employed with Eklund at the Hot Shoppe, told of a boat trip to an island in the Potomac with two others. Eklund, himself and another of the boys, he said, practiced shooting a revolver at a tree.

A Washington Post clipping relating to the shooting of McClaine—dated one day later—was introduced as evidence and was said to have been found among Eklund's effects in a room in Baltimore.

Ex-Polish Envoy Plunges to Death

New York, July 1 (AP).—Gen. Boselaw Wieniawa-Dlugoszewski, 65, Polish ambassador to Italy in 1939, fell or jumped to his death from the roof of a six-story building at 3 Riverside Drive today.

He climbed to the roof clad in pajamas and bedroom slippers, detectives said. His body was found in a vacant lot next door to the building.

Police reported that the general had recently received an appointment as ambassador to Cuba for the Polish-government-in-exile.

Authorities said a telegram bearing a diplomatic message arrived for the general shortly before his death.

The Polish consul-general in New York, Sylvyn Strakacz, said the general was subject to dizzy spells and apparently had gone to the roof "to get a little air."
